Social media threat shuts schools

Julie Brown
Special Writer

Wayne-Westland Community Schools were closed Tuesday due to social media threats.

Schools Superintendent Shelley Holt posted a letter online stating, "Today, Wayne-Westland schools in conjunction with law enforcement as well as county and state officials has spent the majority of our day investigating several threats that have been posted on social media. As we continue to investigate with layers of law enforcement we have decided to cancel school for the entire district on Tuesday, Feb. 27, 2018 to ensure the safety and security of our children, staff and buildings.

"Parents and families, we need your help. These threats are coming from someone's social media account and we need your assistance to ensure that it is not coming from your home. Please check your child's snapchat, text messages and any other social media accounts to ensure it is not coming from yours.

"If you see any messages or receive information regarding the threats, do not forward or repost any of these messages. Call the police immediately.

We will be working with law enforcement throughout the night and day tomorrow to ensure all buildings are safe.

"We apologize for any inconvenience, but hope you can appreciate the extra safety measures being taken. While I understand that many want to know what is going on in real time, this is not possible during an active investigation, so please bear with us as we work with law enforcement to address and stabilize these threats. You will receive a message from me tomorrow (Wednesday) about classes on Wednesday," the letter concluded.

Well read Local book clubs foster the shared love of reading

Julie Brown
Special Writer

Jennie Mosseri is new to the Romulus Public Library, but she is already very familiar with the popularity of book groups for adult readers.

"It's just a bunch of people who get together who enjoy reading," said adult services librarian Mosseri, who started at Romulus on Jan. 29 this year.

Romulus has a Second Monday Book Club Discussion at 7 p.m. each month at the library on Wayne Road. Romulus also has a group for those age 55 and up that meets at 10:30 a.m. the third Tuesday of the month at the Romulus Senior Center, 3525 Bibles St.

Those are among a plethora of adult reading groups that have taken off in recent years. Sue Patterson, adult services librarian at the Plymouth District Library, who coordinates Contemporary Books at the facility, is a supporter of the book discussion groups.

"I think they gain a lot of insight. It helps bridge cultures. I think there are a lot of advantages to it. Shared reading helps people understand and interpret books. You learn about yourself and the community. I always gain a lot from joining in and participating," she said.

At Romulus, newcomer Mosseri has started by observing the two reading groups in the community, and is eager to join the discussions. In March, her Second Monday group is discussing "Glory Over Everything: Beyond the Kitchen House" by Kathleen Grissom.

That's a return to the author's earlier "The Kitchen House," she noted, and should yield a lively discussion.

"It's a very active group. Everyone participates in the discussion," said Mosseri. "Everyone's welcome to join the discussion."

She had been a children's librarian, and finds her college literature background helpful. At Romulus each fall, members choose their books to read.

"I think the different group members have points that interest them," said Mosseri. "That's kind of what guides our conversation."

Newcomers are welcome to join the regular attendees, she emphasized. Patterson, whose Plymouth Contemporary Books meets at 7 p.m. the second Tuesday of the month, agrees.

Patterson has led that group, which chooses titles for discussion each July for some 13-14 years. On Feb. 13, they discussed "The Buried Giant" by Kazuo Ishiguro, a novel with elements of mythology.

The discussion was excellent, said Patterson. "It also dealt with a lot of themes that are relevant today," she said, including aging, memory loss, infidelity, and forgiveness after war.

Members discussed atrocities of the 20th and 21st centuries, and such issues as tensions between North Korea and South Korea, "and whether you hold onto your grudges. There's a lot to be said about that," Patterson noted.

She finds people like new genres. "They gave it a shot

Supervisor abandons Congress campaign

Kurt Heise will not be resigning as supervisor of Plymouth Township to seek a term in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Heise confirmed last week that he has ended his fledgling campaign for the 11th District House seat and announced that he will support Michigan Senate floor leader Mike Kowall in his bid for the seat now filled by U.S. Rep. Dave Trotter, who opted not to seek reelection.

All are Republicans.

Heise said Kowall's popularity was a factor in his decision and that he felt his own chances diminished when Kowall announced his intent to seek the office. Heise said he felt that Kowall had the best chance in a field of candidates that currently includes Republicans Lena Epstein, Kerry Bentivolio, Kristine Bonds, Clint Kesto and Rocky Raczowski along with Democrats Dan Haberman, Suneel Gupta, Fayrouz Saad and Tim Givinski.

Heise, who formerly served as a state representative, is in the second year of his four-year term as Supervisor of Plymouth Township. He defeated former supervisor and Wayne County Commissioner Shannon Price who was appointed to the job when Richard Reaume resigned mid-term and moved to Florida. Heise defeated Price in a write-in campaign amidst rampant public discontent voiced by residents at public meetings regarding a more than $2 million recreation plan for the township.

Heise's announced plan to seek national office was also publicly criticized by residents who felt that he misled them during the write-in campaign.

In a formal statement last week supporting Kowall, Heise thanked voters for their past support.

"I want to thank you for support and commitment to my campaign," the letter stated. "I am honored by your confidence and trust. It is an honor to serve as Plymouth Township Supervisor, and I look forward to many years of continued public service."

Artist shares talent at health facility

Paintings and sculptures of giraffes, elephants, rhinoceros, lions and tigers adorn the walls of Nick Bair's home art studio in Canton Township. Many of the life-like artworks are complete, and many more are in progress on easels and hanging on the walls.

Bair, 24, was inspired by safari life after he had the opportunity to see the desert and its natural inhabitants first-hand.

Now, a vast selection of his safari-inspired work is being displayed at the new Exceptional Families Autism Center, located within the building shared by the Beaumont Center for Exceptional Families and University of Michigan-Dearborn's Early Childhood Education Center.

The center opened last fall and the space is dedicated to families seeking individual and select services for their children based on individual needs.

"One of the most important things about this center and what makes it a crown jewel is that we have so many important disciplines all in one place," said Jason Majchrzak, supervisor, Autism Center and board certified behavior analyst. "The Autism Center is a one-stop-shop for families who require a diverse set of services and disciplines to further their child's progress."

Everywhere you look, from the lobby to the conference rooms, classrooms, offices and learning areas, there's an art piece created by Bair. Though now in his 20s, Bair still has biannual appointments with Susan Youngs, MD, medical director of the Beaumont Children's CEF. They meet to catch up on his progress and walk through any areas where he may need assistance or medical advice.

"Nick is a special and very talented young man," said Youngs. "I'm so proud to see how far he's come, and that he has excelled in a way that honors his passion for life. His interest in art and being active and involved in other activities shows how much he's grown."

According to his mom, Christina Bair, talking was difficult for Bair when he was younger. She said he used to draw a lot of pictures and his art would help him communicate with his parents and caregivers. His inspiring and desire to learn more about mixed media artwork and other techniques led him to take a weekly class at the College for Creative Studies in Detroit.

His father, Derek Bair, M.D. is the Corporate Director of Neonatology at Beaumont Hospital, Dearborn. He's taken pen and ink art classes with his son, which his mother joins at the College for Creative Studies to take notes about the business aspect of art so Bair can focus on his work.

"I do believe there's some genetic part of being an artist. His dad is an artist, and so are two of his grandparents," Christina Bair said. "Even from a very early age in preschool, he would be drawing shapes with his fingers in sand."

She added, "Sometimes people say 'Oh, it's a savant ability' and it's not. This is who Nick is and he has worked very hard at it. He didn't come out of the box drawing masterpieces. It is who he is and we want him to have the same opportunity as anyone else to do this."

Recently Bair toured the new autism center with his dad. When asked about his impression of seeing his artwork displayed for the first time, he said, "It looks like I was famous."

He also had a few words for another young child with autism who might be interested in pursuing drawing. "I started drawing dinosaurs when I was young," he said. "They should try and draw lots of different things. They should find things that excite them to learn about."

For now, Bair is working on an acrylic painting of a flamingo from the Caribbean. In between his art class, a part-time job at a local grocery store and karate classes with his dad, he's refining his painting and planning for it to be part of an art exhibit in his hometown of Canton.

"Nick is a great example of someone with autism who has found a balance in his passion for art and other responsibilities in his life," said Youngs. "He's worked hard, but also has the drive to learn and get better at it."

To see more of Bair's works of art, visit www.artistnickbair.com. For more information about the Beaumont Children's Center for Exceptional Families, the University of Michigan-Dearborn Early Childhood Education Center and the Exceptional Families Autism Center, call (313) 996-1951 or visit Beaumont.org. Autism treatment services are also available through Beaumont Children's Center for Human Development.

Board discusses land value

Administrators from the Van Buren Public Schools will hear recommendations regarding the market price and the possible sale of several district-owned properties this month.

Director of Buildings and Grounds James Williams told members of the board of education at their last meeting that a group of administrators would have the results of appraisals ordered on four properties this month. He said a group from the administration would review the results and then prepare a report for the members of the board of education.

The properties include a 1984 site on Denton Road in Canton Township zoned R-1, Single Family Residential, estimated value of $533,478, 31.52 acres at 17001 Elwell Road, Sumpter Township, zoned AG - Agricultural, estimated value of $847,541, 10.93 acres on Morton Taylor Road, Van Buren Township, zoned RIB, Single Family Residential, estimated value of $279,577 and 8.56 acres in West Willow, Ypsilanti Township, zoned R-5 One-Family Residential, estimated value, $230,170.

Board members also discussed the feasibility of purchasing the estimated 10 acres of land owned by St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Belleville which is zone R-1, Single Family Residential. The estimated value of that property is about $269,890, according to a presentation from Plante Moran CRESA representatives who attended the meeting to help discuss potential land sales or acquisitions.

Superintendent of Schools Pete Kudlak told the board members that there had been some interest in buying some of the district-owned sites. "At one point there was talk about buying the St. Anthony property," Kudlak told the board members. "We'll narrow details down to get closer to whether we want to buy or sell."

No date for the upcoming report was announced.

and felt they benefited from it. I think just the idea of sharing their views when they read. I think more and more people are reading for pleasure. It's both social and intellectual," said Patterson, who cited more book publicity, including Oprah Winfrey's, contributing to book group popularity.

Plymouth also hosts a Brown Bags Books group at noon the fourth Wednesday of the month. Plymouth's Books on Tap is co-hosted by the Liberty Street Brewing Co. in Old Village.

In addition, a library science student intern, Franco Vitella, has just started a "Graphic Novel League" at Plymouth for fans of that genre.

Plymouth's website is www.plymouthlibrary.org, while the Romulus Public Library is at www.romuluslibrary.org.

In addition to the popular adult reading groups, many libraries offer books in a bag to allow readers to form their own groups. Children's and teen book discussions also are popular.

Other library websites with more information are the Northville District Library at www.northvillelibrary.org, the William P. Faust Public Library of Westland at www.westlandlibrary.org, the Canton Public Library at www.cantonmi.org and the Leanna Hicks Public Library of Inkster at www.inksterlibrary.net.

The William P. Faust Public Library of Westland has diverse offerings in adult book groups. The new Nonfiction Book Club meets at 7 p.m. on the third Wednesday of the month at the library on Central City Parkway.

Westland also offers a Noontime Book Club at noon on the last Tuesday of every month, as well as a Science Fiction/Fantasy Book Club which meets at 7 p.m. on the last Wednesday of every month. Westland also hosts a periodic Family Book Club, with details at www.westlandlibrary.org under Book Discussion Groups.

The Canton Public Library at Canton Center Road has ample offerings for adult readers, including the Adult Contemporary Book Discussion Group at 7 p.m. the third Monday of the month. Canton also has a Seniors Book Discussion Group at 2 p.m. the fourth Thursday of the month (December excluded). Lunch and a Book at noon the second Thursday of the month, and the Nonfiction Book Group at 10 a.m. the third Saturday of the month.

The Canton library is also helping English as a Second Language (ESL) learners hone their language skills by discussing books. With help from the Plymouth-Canton Community Literacy Council, public librarians offer a weekly Friday book discussion. Those books are chosen primarily based on level of text, including cultural idioms, said program librarian Lauren Fawcett.

That ESL effort also includes an every other week gathering as language learners progress to more advanced knowledge of English.

"I think it's people with common interests that enjoy an opportunity to connect. Our book clubs are very well-attended," Fawcett said.

The Canton Public Library Adult Contemporary group members chose books each year, while Canton librarians pick the others and share the book reader role on a rotating basis. About 20 people show up for lunchtime meetings, Fawcett said.

"Occasionally we'll do award-winning books," she added. Canton participants and others are reading the current Great Michigan Read, "X: A Novel," in which Ilyash Shabazz writes with co-author Koda Magon of the early years of her late father, Malcolm X, a civil rights activist.

"One of our main goals here at the library is to connect people with other people. It's nice to get out of the house for a little while," said Fawcett.

Canton has many baby boomers who like to read, and some attend the seniors group. "Obviously by its title it's going to attract a certain demographic," she said.

Some popular fiction authors are occasionally chosen for library discussion, and Fawcett has no problem with that.

"It runs the gamut," she said. "There is something to be said for all of that," she noted of writers like Danielle Steel. "Sure, Absolutely Always."

Legislators blast 'first-language' law

State Rep. Jewell Jones (D-Inkster) was critical of a recent bill enacted in the House of Representatives making English the official language of Michigan.

Jones, along with several other Democratic representatives, said that the new designation would serve only to promote further political division among residents.

The bill HB4053 was introduced abruptly in the House last week. It would require that English be the official language used in all public documents and in all public meetings. Similar policies have been adopted in 32 other states. It was sponsored by Rep. Tom Barrett, R-Pottsville. He claims that it simply codifies into law what is already being practiced in the state.

"It's sad and disappointing that a majority of state legislators felt a need to make English the official state language. This bill pits party against party and person against person when there is no real problem with the language government uses to do its work," Jones said.

He added that he felt this bill was also "dangerous, because it makes refugees, recent immigrants and those with limited English abilities fear that they won't be able to get help from police, the courts or the state Legislature in a language they can understand."

Jones said that the Legislature should be not be "voting for bills that polarize our communities but do nothing to create good-paying jobs, improve our schools or fix our roads."

"I'll continue to make sure the voice of everyone I represent is heard in the Capitol, no matter which language they speak," Jones said.

His sentiments were echoed by state Rep. Erika Geiss (D-Taylor), who also represents Romulus in the State House of Representatives.

"This bill will do nothing more than cause thousands of Michiganders to be designated to a lower class because English - the American version - is not their first language," she said.

"We have no time to waste on frivolous legislation, when we should be focused on making sure our kids are safe, on the roads and in their schools and communities. This is not the time to further divide ourselves into groups of us and them. This is the time to put being Michiganders before such divisive politics," Geiss concluded.

The bill was approved by a 62-46 vote with four Democrats, including Robert Kosowski of Westland, joining most Republicans voting in favor of the legislation.

The bill will now move to the state Senate for a vote.

Mayor's Ball is Saturday

Belleville Mayor Korreen Conley and Romulus Mayor LeRoy Burdorf are once again teaming up to host the 5th Annual Mayor's Ball beginning at 6 p.m. March 3, to support the Belleville and Romulus Boys and Girls Clubs.

During the past four years the event has raised thousands of dollars to support the organization which provides a safe place for hundreds of children to go after school when there may be no other alternative.

The evening at the Belleville Yacht Club (BYC) includes dinner, dancing and a live and silent auction with all proceeds supporting the Boys and Girls Clubs. Usual attendance at the event is about 300 community and industry leaders, including Southeastern Michigan mayors, supervisors, council members, trustees, school board members, county commissioners, state representatives and U.S. congress representatives, according to a prepared release.

The Boys and Girls Club provides an environment centered on values, respect, education, and creativity allowing children to grow. Funds are needed to support programming for life skills, leadership, goal setting, tutoring, and recreational activities that expand the minds and imagination of the students, positioning them to succeed in a world that sometimes is stacked against them, according to a statement.

Sponsorships for the Mayor's Ball are now available at several funding levels to fit any budget, a spokesperson said. Donations are also being sought for the silent and live auctions at the event. Popular auction items are sporting event tickets, baskets, or cash contributions toward live auction items. All donations are tax deductible and the organization is a 501(c)(3) designee. ID number 381387123. For more information, contact Conley's office at (313) 969-5181 or email mayorsball@yahoo.com.

NORTHVILLE - PLYMOUTH

School bond sale is 'well received'

Members of the Northville Public Schools Board of Education of Northville are more than pleased with the sale of the 2018 building and site bonds approved by voters last year.

The 2018 School Building and Site Bonds, Series I, in the amount of $11,900,000, representing the first series of bonds, being issued for the purpose of erecting, furnishing and equipping additions to and remodeling, furnishing and refurbishing, and equipping and re-equipping school facilities; acquiring and installing instructional technology in school facilities; purchasing school buses; erecting, furnishing, equipping, developing and improving playgrounds, sites, athletic fields and facilities, and paying the cost of issuing the bonds, a district spokesman explained.

The positive financial rating for the district's bond issue contributed to the opportunity to sell the bonds at a favorable rate, maximizing the bond dollars targeted directly toward upgrading school facilities, enhancing existing school security, and providing students across the district with modern learning environments," said Northville Superintendent of Schools Mary Kay Gallagher.

"Our primary goal is to support learning for all students in a district that prepares them for meeting the expectations and demands of colleges, universities and employers now, and in the future. These improvements will enhance Northville Public Schools' tradition of excellence, while honoring our board of education's commitment to strong stewardship of the community's investment in our schools," she added.

The district's financing was conducted by the Michigan investment banking office of the brokerage firm, Stifel, the municipal advising firm, PFM Financial Advisors LLC and the law firm serving as bond counsel, Thrun Law Firm, PC. The bonds were sold at a true interest rate of 2.25 percent with a final maturity of 2027 (a repayment term of approximately 9 years).

"Northville Public Schools' bonds were well received by the bond market. We were able to take advantage of current interest rates that met the goals of the district and resulted in a lower cost of borrowing than originally anticipated," said Brenda Voynas, managing director with Stifel.

Commission to vote on adding 3 liquor licenses

Members of the Plymouth City Commission are expected to vote for the second and final time next week to increase the limit on city liquor licenses to 16 in the downtown area and 12 in other areas of the city.

The commission took an initial vote on the proposal last week following a report from the three-member Liquor License Review Board chaired by Mayor Pro Tem Colleen Polur.

A second and final vote lifting the overall limit from 25 to 28 is expected at the March 5 meeting. In addition, commissioners have amended other rules and will now allow a proposed brewpub to seek a permit, rather than a liquor license if it is located in a restaurant that has a Class C liquor license.

Two local businesses, Greek Islands Eatery and Western Market, have been seeking approval from the city for liquor licenses and the increase is expected to favor the applications they have previously submitted.

Plymouth Mayor Oliver Wolcott commented that the city needs to evolve and change if it is to compete with cities like Detroit, where new restaurants and bars are attracting throngs of young people.

"Every community is seeing the effect of what's happening in downtown Detroit," he said. "It has, obviously, had an impact on the restaurants and bars in small suburban towns like Plymouth. It's time now to allow a couple of new things to be downtown," Wolcott commented at the commission meeting.

Wolcott added that Police Chief Al Cox had been consulted regarding the proposed increase in licenses at the city level. The mayor said that Cox assured him that the current number of officers can handle any enforcement issues. Wolcott also addressed the concerns regarding parking in the city and said that officials are pursuing ways to create more downtown parking in an effort to avoid those problems.

Polur was also in favor of the change. She and the other board members met six times to discuss the possible increase in licenses in the city.

"We're seeing a change in our restaurants in the community. That's good because it keeps things lively, it keeps things vibrant and it keeps things fresh," she said. Polur also noted that the current enforcement by the police department and the cooperation from businesses that already have liquor licenses have "changed the culture in the community."

If you come to Plymouth, don't drive drunk or you will get caught," she said.

The only dissenting vote on the recommendation came from Commissioner Ed Kroll who said that he had heard from some residents who were opposed to the increase in liquor licenses.

Currently, two of the existing liquor licenses in the city are in reserve and not in use, one at Panache 447 which is closed and the other at the former Plymouth Crossing, which has been closed for some time.

State grants $650,000 to build technology center

The Michigan Economic Development Corporation has awarded a $650,000 performance-based grant from the Michigan Business Development Program to assist Zhongding U.S.A., Inc. in constructing their North American Technology Center in Northville Township.

Established in 1980, Zhongding U.S.A., Inc. has locations in several states, including Michigan, Delaware and Massachusetts. The company produces rubber and metal parts for original equipment manufacturers and Tier 1 suppliers around the world.

"It's no surprise that businesses are investing in unique local communities like Northville," noted State Rep. Jeff Noble.

"Providing this grant brings additional commercial and job growth to an already thriving community."

At a projected 30,000 square feet, the North American Technology Center will house various Zhongding divisions, including sales, marketing, engineering, research and development and testing. The project is expected to generate a total capital investment of $6.9 million, creating 80 jobs in Northville Township.
