Radioactive waste site prompts concern

Senator Hoon-Yung Hopgood (D-Taylor) and Representative Kristy Pagan (D-Canton) have requested a public hearing by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) to further address local concerns about the potential disposal of radioactive waste from hydraulic fracturing operations in Michigan landfills. Dozens of concerned citizens attended a DEQ presentation at a meeting of the Van Buren Township Board of trustees last week, indicating the need for a hearing for public comment.

The DEQ presentation concerned the disposal of radioactive fracking waste at Wayne County Disposal facilities in the township. The disposal company is seeking permits to dispose of radioactive waste which registers more than 10 times the maximum levels allowed in other states which have rejected the waste.

More than 50 concerned residents packed the meeting room to hear the findings and recommendations of the state and members of the Technologically Enhanced Naturally Occurring Radioactive Materials (TENORM) Disposal Advisory Panel. Many of the residents stayed until late in the evening to listen to the reports.

The presentation included the findings of a panel appointed by Gov. Rick Snyder which determined that the Van Buren facility could handle even higher radioactivity levels without risk. That report, issued in February, allowed the landfill to resume the disposal operations of the waste. USEcology, owner of the Wayne Disposal facility between I-94 and Willow Run Airport, voluntarily suspended accepting low-activity radioactive waste while the panel convened.

“This was a great opportunity for the community to hear about the issue, but last night only scratched the surface of the thousands of local residents and business owners who will be affected. With the high turnout last night, there is a clear need for the DEQ to hold a true public hearing to address local citizens' questions and concerns,” said Hopgood. “As other states are tightening regulations and turning away this radioactive waste, why are some Michigan officials so eager to roll out the red carpet for it? The DEQ must continue to engage local citizens, answer questions like

Down to earth Volunteer gardens aid area veteran's groups

It took Vickie Miller nearly 10 years to follow her mother's last wishes regarding the family farm in Belleville where she was raised.

But when the light finally dawned on her, Miller said, she knew exactly what she needed to do at the 20-acres of property her parents bought in 1965.

“Before my mother passed in 1999, she told me she wanted me to do something with the land to help others,” Miller said. “Years went by and I was taking care of my Dad who is an 85-year-old Korean War veteran, and it finally came to me. It was time to do something and it should be something that would help veterans.”

She met permaculture specialist Shane Celeste in 2013 and the ensuing conversation about the importance of freshly-grown food helped her realize that her land could provide locally-raised fruits and vegetables for those who might otherwise not have them available, especially veterans. She and Celeste founded Eating Gardens and then applied for a Wayne County Food Initiative Grant. Last November the gardening effort was awarded funding for a 2,100 square-foot Hoop House to be installed at the Belleville Farm. The structure is a covered gardening site, warmed by the sun with constant wind circulation.

“The ground stays warm,” Miller said, “and you can grow

Beck Road paving causes delays

The repaving and expansion of Beck Road by Wayne County is causing headaches for drivers going to and from Plymouth High School in Canton Township, but it's a project that has been long awaited and will make traffic in the area much more manageable when it's done, according to a county spokesman.

During the past weeks, the county has worked closely with Dr. Michael Meissen, Plymouth Canton Community Schools superintendent, and his staff to minimize the traffic impact for students, parents, staff and daily commuters.

The project, which is expected to last about six months, was started the week of April 20 and could be complete before the end of the 2015 construction season.

Beck is being repaved between Warren Road in Canton to just south of Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth Township, and it will be expanded from two lanes to three between Warren and Ann Arbor roads.

“We fully understand that this is a temporary annoyance, but it is necessary for the continued growth and improvement of our community,” said newly-appointed Wayne County Commissioner Joe Barone, whose 10th District covers Canton Township, Plymouth Township and the city of Plymouth. “Unfortunately, it had to spill into a school year because of the project's length. The county wants to make sure the project is done by this fall.

“Beck Road has long been in need of repair, and we ask for patience during this construction period. These short-term delays will provide much-needed long-term relief, especially for Plymouth High traffic.”

Northbound Beck is closed between Joy and Ann Arbor roads in Plymouth Township. Southbound Beck has one lane open in that stretch, only open to drivers trying to reach

Inkster Police Chief resigns

Inkster Police Chief Vicki Yost tendered her resignation last Wednesday.

Yost, who had been chief for about 9 months, came to Inkster after a 19-year career with the Detroit Police Department. When she left the Detroit department she was a deputy chief overseeing the patrol division in the city.

While Yost offered to give the city 30-days notice of her departure, a release from the office of City Manager Richard Marsh, Jr. said that her resignation was “effective immediately.”

Yost said that her decision came following a meeting with city officials on Wednesday that demonstrated that they were “not on the same page” as to the management of the department during the current situation.

“Today there was a meeting that we weren't philosophically and fundamentally in step on how to heal the community and how to move the community forward,” she said. She declined to offer any details.

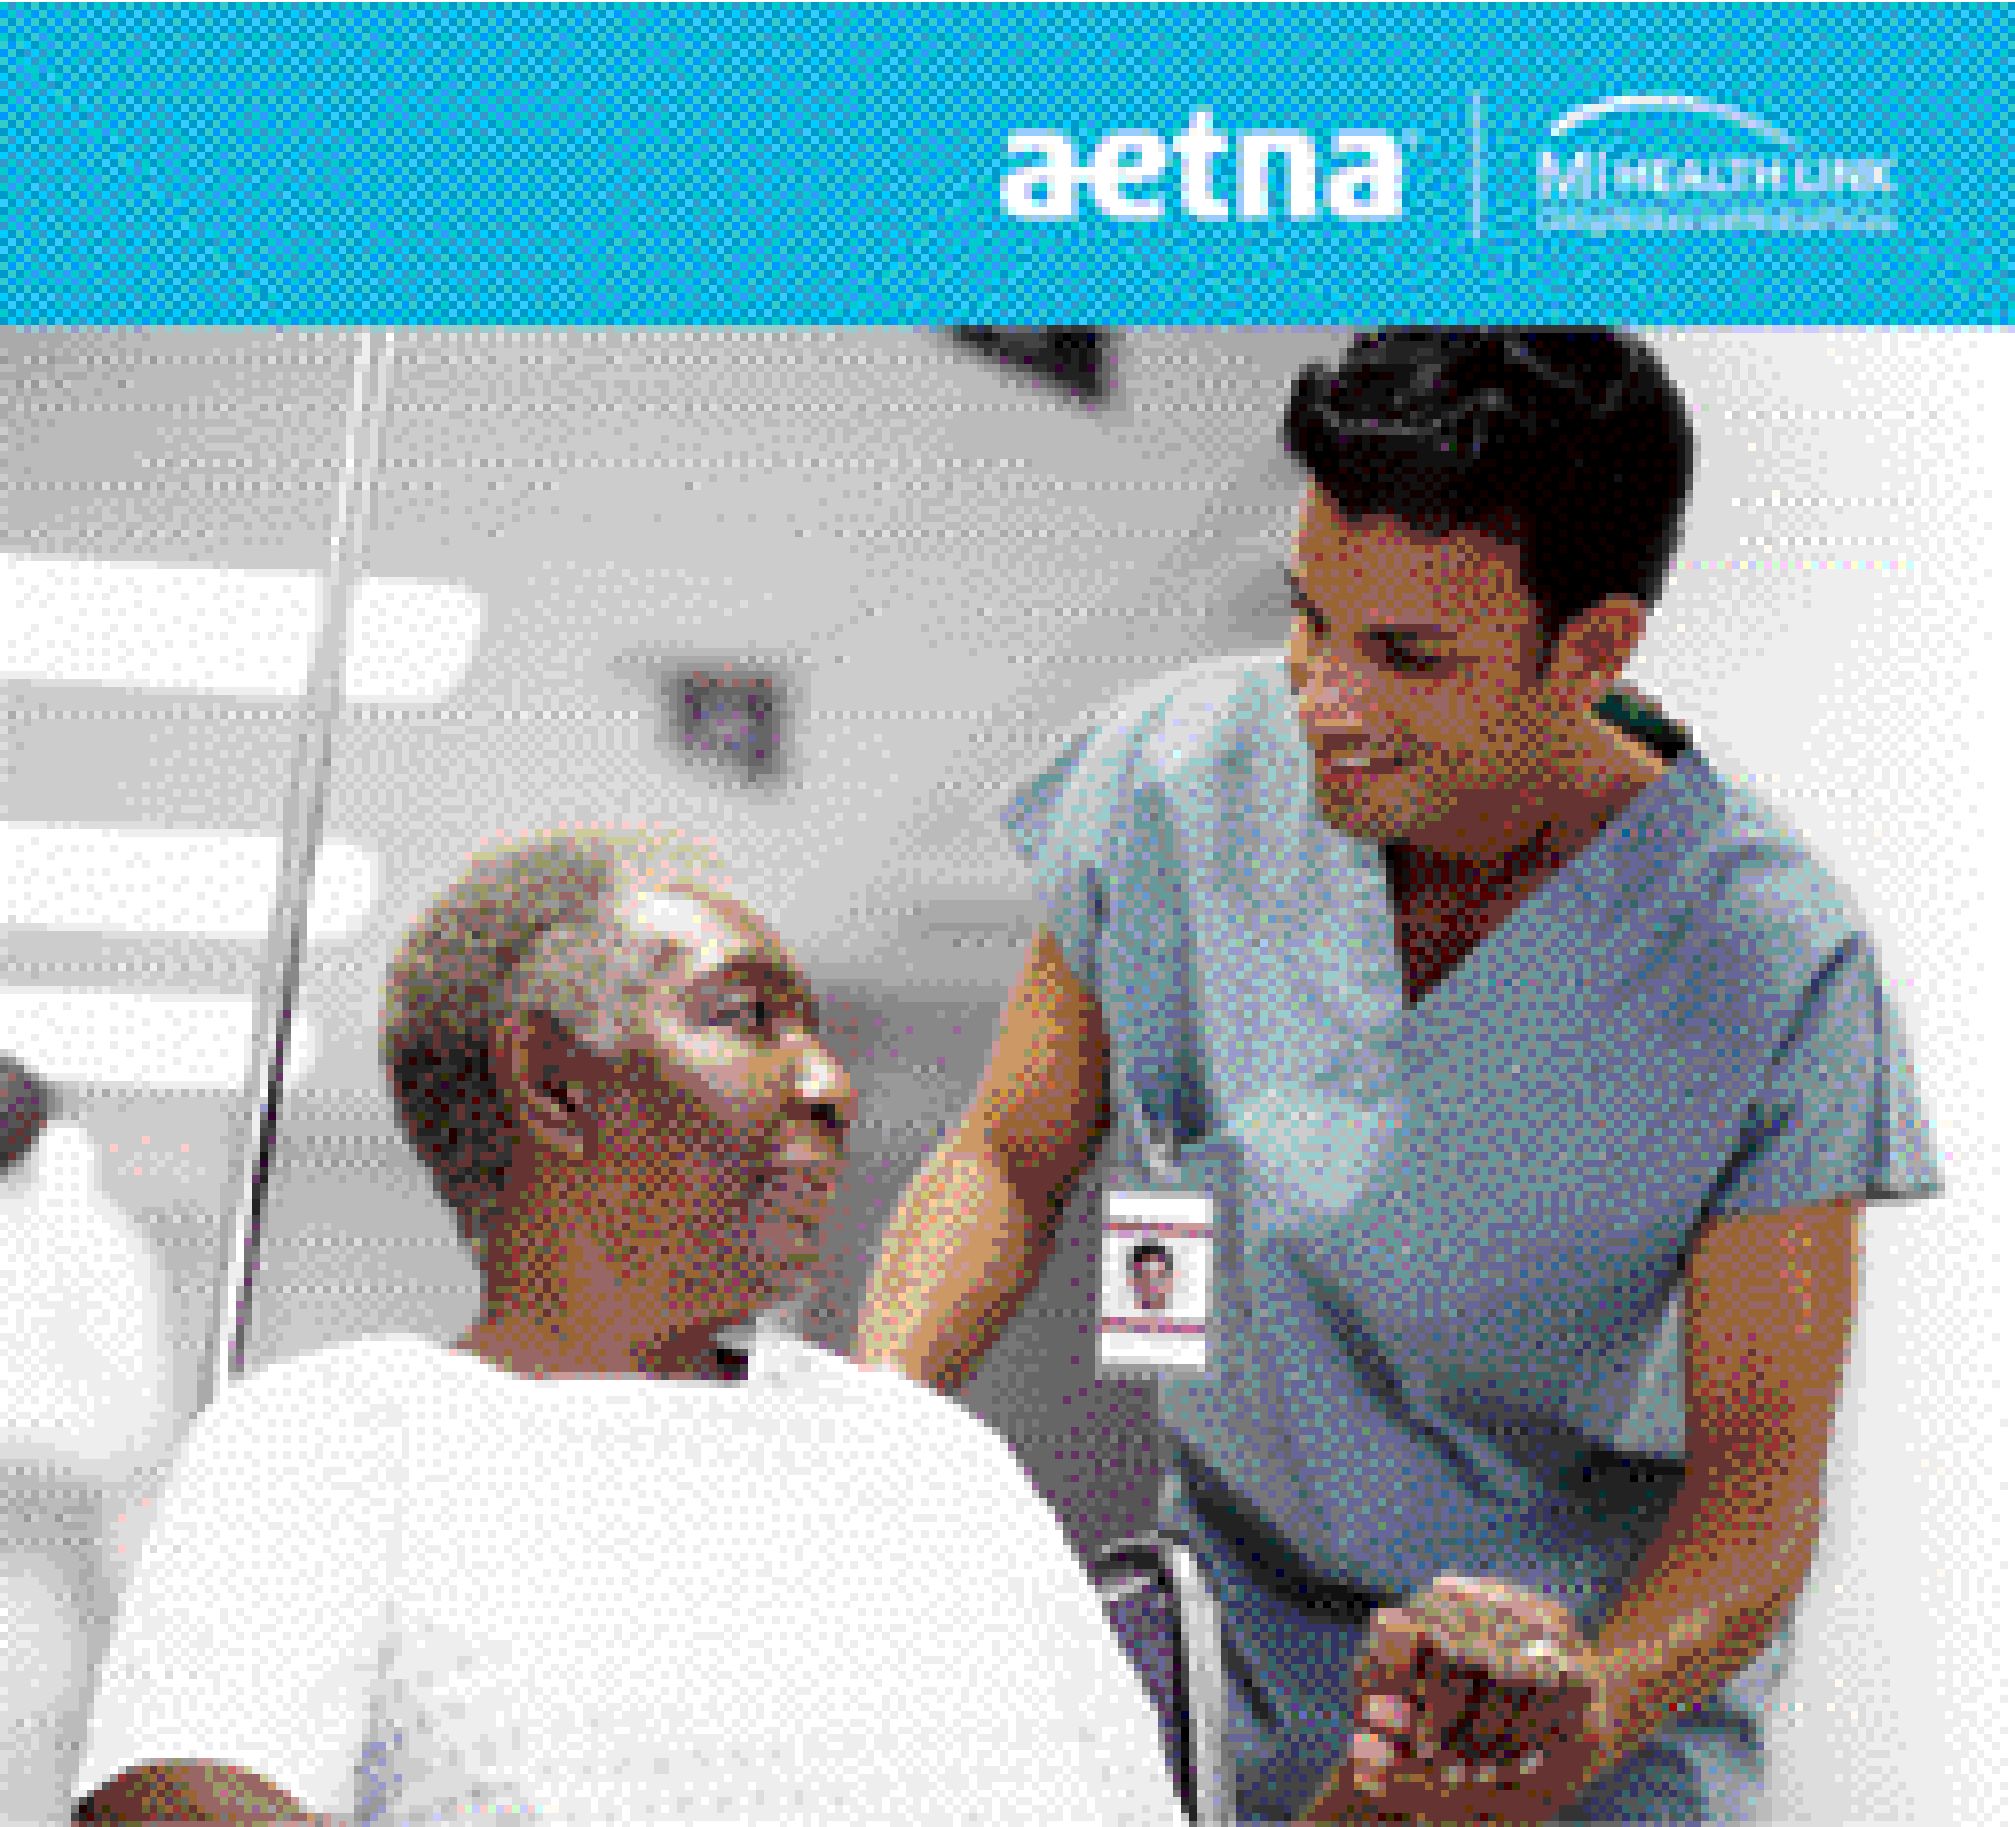

Yost's departure came on the heels of the dismissal of possession of cocaine charges against Floyd Dent, a Detroit resident who was arrested and charged with drug possession, eluding and fleeing and resisting arrest by Inkster police Jan. 28. Following the release of videotapes from the responding patrol cars at the scene, which showed Dent being viciously beaten, kicked and tasered by officers, the incident became a national internet sensation.

The officer seen beating Dent with his closed fist, William Melendez, was fired by Inkster and subsequently charged with abuse of a prisoner and assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder by Wayne County Prosecutor Kym Worthy.

Worthy said in a prepared statement that her office had never seen the videotape of the arrest as officers did not submit the tape with the police reports of the incident when they

Fired fire marshall requests jury trial in suit

Former Van Buren Township Fire Inspector Anthony Karver has demanded a jury trial in his Whistleblower lawsuit against the township.

Karver, who was fired March 10, 2014, had protested his termination through a union grievance was denied reinstatement and damages April 10. His firing was upheld as by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service April 10, after several delays.

Mediator Joseph P Girolamo signed the decision denying Karver's grievance and agreeing with the township which argued that he had been fired because he failed to successfully pass the Fire Inspector II test, a requirement for the position. The township also claimed that Karver, who was hired in 1992, could not continue as a paid on-call firefighter because he attended fires as part of his job as a fire inspector.

Karver claimed, through his union, that he was fired because he reported the highest-paid township employee,

Ken Floro, for repeatedly doing hours of personal errands while on duty.

"... the decision to terminate Captain Karver was unrelated to his complaint about Captain Floro," stated Van Buren Township Supervisor Linda Combs in the filings submitted to the mediator.

Karver subsequently completed the Fire Inspector II test one month after he was fired.

Karver's Whistleblower lawsuit, filed in June of last year, names the township, Fire Chief Daniel Besson, Combs, Public Safety Director Greg Laurain and Battalion Chief/Fire Marshall David McNally. In the suit, he claims that he was fired not for failing to pass the test, but because he threatened to inform the members of the township board that Floro was getting paid for hours he was not on the job if the officials to whom he reported the information did not correct the situation.

The Whistleblower case, filed by Karver's attorney,

Richard Convertino, on June 11, 2014, requests reinstatement of Karver to his former employment without loss of seniority; reinstatement as a captain in the fire department; back pay; $25,000 as compensation for pain, suffering, loss of reputation, emotional distress, mental anguish, embarrassment, humiliation, outrage and other injuries; exemplary and punitive damages, interest, court costs and attorney fees.

A settlement conference in the case is scheduled for July 6.

these and let everyone involved weigh in."

"While I appreciate the DEQ's presentation to the township board and attendees last night, I believe all residents who will be directly affected by this waste disposal deserve to have their say at a true public hearing," Pagan said. "Disposing of radioactive waste in our neighborhoods can pose significant risks, and people have a right to know what those are and what the DEQ plans to do about them."

In addition to calling on the DEQ to tighten fracking waste regulations, Hopgood and Pagan are also working to address the threat legislatively. They have introduced Senate Bill 277 and House Bill 4469 respectively to regulate radioactive fracking waste storage in Michigan and ensure that landfills and other facilities could not accept waste that exceeds 50 picocuries per gram. This measurement is nationally recognized as a uniform safety number for limiting radiation exposure associated with this type of waste and is currently a rule adhered to by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ).

TENORM involves materials whose low, naturally occurring radiation levels are increased through human activities that concentrate them. The controversial oil and gas drilling practice known as hydraulic fracturing, or fracking, is a major generator of it. Wayne Disposal accepted up to 36 tons of radioactive fracking sludge from a Pennsylvania oil and gas drilling company - after it had been turned away by landfills in Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Wayne Disposal on its website advertises its ability as one of few landfills in the U.S. capable of accepting TENORM waste.

Wayne Disposal had requested the DEQ allow it a tenfold increase in allowed radioactivity, up to 500 picocuries per gram, last year, but withdrew the request last October. Yale said the panel's report found "because of the extra controls that are in place at a Type I landfill, the DEQ could consider evaluating that for possibly having a higher level," but no plans are imminent.

The panel recommended that all landfills accepting TENORM restrict its placement to at least 10 feet below the bottom of a landfill cap, and said DEQ Director Dan Wyant should consider requiring landfills to restrict the total volume of TENORM waste placed annually, to limit worker exposure. Radium-226, commonly found in TENORM, decays to radon 222, a potential carcinogen through inhalation.

food into the winter. It gives you an extended season." Miller and her group of volunteers currently use about 2 acres of the Belleville farm, but she is hoping to expand her efforts and produce even more fresh food. The produce is donated to local groups such as Veterans' Haven and soup kitchens, Miller said.

"I was raised to help people and I love locally-grown fruits and vegetables," she said, "so this was a natural progression for me."

Miller, who has been at Ford Motor Co. in Wayne for 23 years and is now a group team leader in the chassis department, involved fellow members of UAW Ford 900 in Wayne in her efforts and several of them have volunteered to help at her latest project, a 20-by 30-foot Veterans' Garden located behind the union hall on Michigan Avenue in Wayne, directly across from the auto plant. This spring marks the first planting season at the Wayne site and volunteers will sow strawberries, garlic, oregano, beans, peas, tomatoes and eggplants throughout April at the raised-bed garden.

These are the same crops she and a group of volunteers including her husband, Joe, daughter, Ashley, 15 and son, Matthew, 17, planted in the Belleville garden.

"The volunteers come from everywhere. Some are college students, high school kids, neighbors and community groups," she said. "And we are lucky to have donations of cardboard, mulching materials, woodchips, compost, hay, many things businesses might otherwise throw away."

Miller has also taken her efforts at locally-grown food into schools to try and teach children about the benefits of gardening. At Bishop Elementary School in Ypsilanti, she started a project with 6th graders that resulted in 22 gardens at the school which produced about 85 pounds of vegetables.

Eating Gardens is a non-profit organization and operates under the umbrella of the North Woodward Community Foundation, a 501 c 3.

UAW-Ford's Local-900 donated needed materials that could be recycled at the garden such as woodchips and composting material.

"We are always proud to discover our members positively improving their neighborhoods," said Jimmy Settles, UAW-Ford vice-president. "This type of impact embodies UAW-Ford's mission to improve the quality of life for our members, workplace and the communities in which we live and work" requested a warrant for Dent from her office. She said her office first became aware of the tape when it was shown on a local television newscast. Worthy recommended dropping the drug charges against Dent when the tape was enhanced as part of a state police investigation and an independent investigation by her office. The tape appears to show Melendez taking a small bag of white powder from his pocket and then claiming to have found it under the seat of Dent's 2011 Cadillac.

Melendez was also fired from a part-time detective position with the Highland Park Police Department. He appeared for arraignment on the charges last week and was given a $25,000 cash or surety bond. He will appear in court next week for pre-trial proceedings.

Yost said that she experienced a great deal of pressure to provide information that could have impacted on the criminal investigation the Michigan State Police conducted into the arrest.

Marsh said that there is currently a review of the other officers involved in the arrest under way.

"I'm requesting a complete review of all the officers involved," Marsh said.

Marsh and other city officials also publicly thanked the community and several local ministers for the patience and order with which demonstrations regarding the matter had been handled.

"We just wanted to thank them for the peaceful demonstrations and their patience in letting the investigations into the matter proceed. They sent us their message in a civilized manner and they let the system work.

"I think many other communities could learn a lesson from the way the residents in Inkster handled this situation," Marsh said.

Westland names 2014 Police Officer of the Year

Cale Furney has been named the Westland Police Department Officer of the Year for 2014.

Furney, a two-year veteran of the department was recognized for his keen skills and observations that led to numerous arrests and convictions, according to Mayor William Wild who officially announced the award March 20.

A graduate of Grand Valley State University with a bachelor's degree in criminal justice, Furney previously worked for the Hamtramck Police Department. In 2014, Furney apprehended two individuals who robbed the Merriman Road Taco Bell in Westland, recovering the weapon used in the robbery. Both the accused were sentenced to prison terms in the incident. He also arrested a parole absconder and recovered a vehicle this parolee had stolen. That offender was also successfully prosecuted and sentenced to prison.

Furney was also instrumental in the arrest of two individuals who broke into Leon's Family Diner and numerous other Wayne Road businesses. Both were apprehended and convicted for their crimes.

"Officer Furney displays the finest traditions of the Westland Police Department," commented Police Chief Jeff Jedrusik. "I am proud to recognize Cale Furney as the 2014 Westland Police Officer of the Year."

Wild further acknowledged Furney's contributions.

"A safe community is among the most important qualities one seeks when choosing where to live or where to locate one's business. Westland is fortunate to have a cadre of skilled law enforcement professionals dedicated to the public safety as is Officer Furney. We congratulate Officer Furney on a job well done," Wild said.

Westland Ofc. Cale Furney accepts congratulations from Mayor William Wild on his selection as Officer of the Year.

Wayne mayor declines to seek election to office

Wayne will have a new mayor after the upcoming election.

Current Mayor James Hawley has chosen not to seek election to the mayoral job and may be resigning from his city council post.

Hawley said that he and his wife recently purchased a winter home in Florida and that his availability for meetings will be limited as his plans move forward. Hawley was appointed to a council vacancy in 2012 and won election to a four-year council term in 2013. He was appointed as mayor when Al Haidous resigned to take a seat on the Wayne County Commission in 2014.

Hawley said that the current city manager form of government in Wayne has been somewhat frustrating for him as the mayor has no more authority than any of the members of the council. He noted that the authority to run the city and "get things done" rests with the city manager in this form of governmental structure.

According to the Wayne City Charter, if Hawley does not seek election as mayor, he could return to his city council seat for the remaining two years on that term. He said that he will probably remain as a city council person, but that the issue of availability for meetings would also be an issue if he opted to stay. He said he would probably wait until the end of the year before submitting his resignation due to his plans to winter in Florida.

Hawley's announcement reportedly prompted the interest of Councilman Skip Monit, Councilwoman Susan Rowe and Bob Boerjte in seeking the mayoral office.

Question of no-bid contracts raised by trustee

Don Howard
Staff Writer

New Plymouth Township Supervisor Shannon Price, officially sworn into office for a second time last week just prior to his first official board meeting Tuesday, has already made some changes in the township.

Following his taking of the oath of office from Michigan Supreme Court Justice Brian K. Zahra during private ceremony, Price chaired his first meeting of the Plymouth Township Board of Trustees.

The only issue of contention during the meeting was a request from Treasurer Ron Edwards for approval of a $40,000 no-bid contract for fireworks for the annual Fourth of July picnic in the township.

Trustee Bob Doroshewitz

criticized Edwards' request saying he felt there was a continued practice of awarding contracts in violation of the purchasing policies established in the township.

Doroshewitz and Edwards worked together for several years on the annual township picnic until the two had a falling-out regarding what Doroshewitz claimed were missing records of donations solicited by Edwards and a lack of proper accounting for the financing of the event.

The picnic is a township function but is funded by donations solicited and collected by Edwards, who also hosts a lavish private party for "donors" as part of the event.

"This will be the third no-bid contract in three months, Doroshewitz said.

"The snow machine was a no-bid contract, the financial system was a no-bid contract and now this will be another." The township board approved the purchase of a snow cannon Edwards requested for the new park recreation area for about $22,000 and also agreed to his request for a $219,275 contract for new financial computer software without requesting bids, which violates the purchasing policy of the township that stipulates bids are required for any purchase in excess of $15,000.

Doroshewitz said he found it absurd that the board members would ignore the established policy.

"This should not be permitted, if we have a purchasing policy we should follow it and not have a double standard and continue to put on the pretense that we're following it."

Edwards argued that officials have the right to bring an item before the full board claiming board members can approve the purchase even if it does not follow the established policy.

Board members approved two motions, one for the award of the contract to Zambelli Fireworks Manufacturing Co. of New Castle, PA, not to exceed $40,000 and another to approve the permit for the fireworks display, both by a 5-2 vote with Doroshewitz and Trustee Chuck Curmi casting the dissenting votes.

Despite his vote in favor of the purchase at the meeting, Price reportedly changed his mind late last week and has made a decision to seek bids for the fireworks next year, following the township purchasing policy. He reportedly said he felt the bids were necessary just to ensure that the township was getting the best deal possible for the fireworks but that time constraints prevented bidding this year.

At the meeting, Price made some changes in the seating arrangements at the board table, moving the supervisor's seat next to that of Edwards and seating the two often dissenting trustees, Doroshewitz and Curmi, next to each other at the far right side of the table. He had the podium relocated to the center of the dais so that those who spoke at meetings would now face the board members.

He also announced that a camera would be installed behind the board table so that the speakers facing the board would have their images captured on the video recordings of the proceedings.
