Lawsuits plague local officials

Northville Township board sued by former fire chief

Former Northville Township Fire Chief Richard Marinucci has sued the municipality for $175,000 claiming wrongful termination, age discrimination, violation of the Michigan Open Meetings Act and denial of due process, among seven separate counts.

Marinucci, 62, was named township fire chief in 2009 and claims in his court filings that he was asked by Northville Township officials in March to resign or be fired due to findings in the township audit. The township was told, according to Marinucci's court filings, that the financial audit would not be "clear" due to "related party disclosures" including a number of fire associations for which Marinucci's wife worked and with which the township conducted business. In the lawsuit, Marinucci claims that township officials were long aware of his relationship and involvement with the industry associations.

The lawsuit was dramatically served on the members of the township board of trustees and administrators during public comments at the regular board meeting last week. Named in the lawsuit are Township Manager Chip Snider, finance Director Marina Neumaier, Public Safety Director John Werth, Human Resources Director and Assistant Manager Debbie Wilhelm, Township Supervisor Bob Nix, Clerk Sue Hillebrand, Treasurer Marjorie Banner and trustees Marvin Goss, Synantha Heath, Mandy Hermann and Fred Shadon.

Werth, who accepted the legal papers on behalf of the administration and board members from the process server said that he felt the "antics were meant to embarrass the board."

The court filings claim that township officials including Snider and the members of the finance committee were informed there was an issue with the financial audit and asked Marinucci to attend a meeting, along with Neumaier. Marinucci claims in his suit that shortly thereafter Werth came to his office and told him to resign or be terminated.

Marinucci claims that he refused to resign and was subsequently ordered to immediately leave the building. He also claims he was denied the opportunity to speak to township officials regarding the issue, as he requested.

He is asking for no less than $250,000 on each of seven counts

Questions regarding the true identity of the plaintiff in a legal complaint filed in Wayne County Circuit Court May 13 demanding the removal of two Plymouth Township candidates from the August ballot continue to surface.

The validity of the named plaintiff, Carl Berry, 76, a former police chief and Republican Party activist, has been questioned by attorney reference footnotes at the bottom of the court filings which indicate that the legal documents were prepared for Faith & Freedom

Berry admitted that the legal fees for the lawsuit are being paid by Faith & Freedom but claims that the lawsuit was his own idea. He said that he "has no idea" what the legal fees or costs for the suit will total.

The legal paperwork, more than 50 pages of arguments, claims that Kurt Heise, a current term-limited state representative and candidate for township supervisor, and Don Schnettler, a candidate for trustee, did not designate the township voting precinct in which they live on the required affidavit of identification when filing to seek office.

Berry said that he "has no idea" what the legal fees or costs for the suit will total.

Named in the lawsuit are Township Clerk Nancy Conzelmann and Wayne County Clerk Cathy Garrett, the Wayne County Election Commission and the Plymouth Township Election Commission. Heise and Schnettler maintain the omission was a minor oversight and can be simply corrected by an amended filing. They have further claimed that the lawsuit is a political ploy aimed primarily at Heise, the only challenger of current Township Supervisor Shannon Price on the Aug. 2 ballot.

Berry said that he is a Price supporter. He said that as a "Republican activist I do this a lot." He said he went to township hall and personally reviewed the filings and discovered the omission.

A footnote on page 1 of the complaint, filed by attorney Robert Huth Jr. of Kirk, Huth, Lange and Badalamenti, references Faith & Freedom/Plymouth Township. Patrick Purtill, Jr. serves as the Director of Legislative Affairs for Faith & Freedom. The organization website description states the group is "committed to educating, equipping, and mobilizing people of faith and like-minded individuals to be effective citizens."

Recently, political mailers criticizing Heise for his support of various House Bills in Lansing that peppered mailboxes in the 48170 zip code also included the Faith & Freedom Coalition of Michigan logo. The controversial mailers contain an address in Brighton, one listed on the non-profit Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs Annual Report as the formal address for President Terry Bowman and

Kurt Heise

Director Randall Thompson.

Heise claims that when he contacted the national organization, Purtill disavowed any knowledge, claim or responsibility for the lawsuit or the mailers, adding that the Faith & Freedom leaders were concerned as they had no knowledge of an active Michigan chapter.

Purtill called the Berry litigation "ridiculous" and sent Heise an endorsement for his work on Criminal Justice Reform in the Conflict regarding the situation has raged and parents have been vocal at crowded meetings of the school board demanding answers.

Van Buren teachers demand damages, return to classrooms

Four teachers in the Van Buren School District have filed a federal lawsuit demanding punitive and compensatory damages from the school system and six of the seven board of education members.

The teachers were accused of cheating on state-required tests by helping students at Savage Elementary School answer questions on the new M-STEP examination. Students at the school scored sixth highest in the state on the math portion and in many cases scored higher than schools dedicated to teaching gifted students. Former Superintendent of Schools Michael VanTassel was ordered by state investigators to conduct an investigation into the allegations of impropriety and five teachers were subsequently forcibly removed from the school in full view of students in January. One of the teachers has settled with the district and returned to work after agreeing to take no further legal action against the district. The four named in the lawsuit include Pamela Bradley, Michelle Komoroff, Brent Held and Rebecca Tunes.

The teachers claim that the district has not formally charged them with any wrongdoing but that they have remained on administrative leave for months. They remain adamant that they were not involved in any cheating and are seeking a return to their jobs, to have any disciplinary records removed from their personnel files and compensatory and punitive financial damages.

Conflict regarding the situation has raged and parents have been vocal at crowded meetings of the school board demanding answers. VanTassel's investigation claimed that the teachers inappropriately coached the students during the testing and alerted them to incorrect answers and provided correct responses. The controversy is alleged to have been a factor in VanTassel's separation from the school district.

The teachers are represented in the suit, filed May 20, by attorney Deborah Gordon of Bloomfield Hills. In the suit only school board member Sherry Prazier is not named among the defendants while VanTassel, interim Superintendent Shonta Longford-Green, and board members Brent Mikulski, Martha Toth, Kathy Kovach, Kevin English, Alison Bennett and Kelly Owen are defendants. The suit claims that the defendants intentionally misled the public and stated publicly that they were involved in a cheating scandal.

The teachers claim that the superintendent and board members violated their freedom of speech, freedom of expression, freedom of association, freedom to petition and due process rights. They claim they have been forced out of the classroom for five months without any formal claim of wrongdoing or disciplinary action.

Romulus senior wins Gates Millennium Scholarship

For the second consecutive year, the Gates Millennium Scholars Program has awarded a scholarship to a Romulus High School Senior. Kingsley Enenichukwu was chosen from 55,000 applicants to follow in the footsteps of Brooke Waldon who was awarded the prestigious Gates Millennium Scholarship last year. Waldon is currently pursuing her degree at Syracuse University. As required, Enenichukwu maintained honor roll status in addition to winning eight scholarly essays.

The scholarship will now allow him to pursue a degree in any undergraduate major and selected graduate programs at any accredited college or university. His plan is to attend the University of Michigan to study finance.

"When I got the letter, I was nervous to open it. I'm so grateful to have this opportunity to represent my community and those who have helped me along the way. My goal is to eventually work on Wall Street," said Enenichukwu.

Established in 1999 with the goal of developing Leaders for America's Future, the Gates Millennium Scholars program is funded by a $1.6 billion grant from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. The program removes the financial barriers to education for high-performing, low-income students. Each year, the Gates Millennium program enables 5,000 students to attend and graduate from 800 of the most selective private and public schools in the country.

"To have students in back-to-back years win this scholarship is a true testament of their dedication and work ethic. It is a reflection of the performance that our administrators, teaching staff and counselors are doing," said Marjorie McAnally, superintendent of Romulus Community Schools.

Pennsylvania Project gains traction

The "Pennsylvania Project" may be gaining some traction in Romulus.

Officials are working with their neighbors and county, state and federal elected officials in hopes of getting a grade separation at the railroad crossing on Pennsylvania Road.

"We're trying to get that going again," said Romulus Mayor Leroy Bureff. "The process has to get some traction in D.C."

Councilman William Wadsworth brought up the issue recently, after a fire in Huron Township destroyed a home-in-part because a train blocked public safety responders from getting to the scene in time.

Even in non-emergency situations, trains can block the intersection and those nearby for long periods of time, causing delays and frustrations.

"It gets blocked sometimes from Eureka to Sibley to Pennsylvania at the same time," Wadsworth said. "Recently I went to buy gas and it took me 30 minutes to come back with five gallons of gas."

Romulus officials had long wanted to get something done about the crossing, to improve public safety and for the convenience of residents of Romulus, Huron Township as well as travelers to and from Metro Airport. The project dated back at former Mayor Bill Oakley, who had the foresight to ask airport engineers to set aside dirt to build the overpass when they were developing the most recent airport runways. At one time, there was about $15 million in federal funds set aside for the project, but those funds have since been reallocated.

The Romulus City Council members adopted a resolution in support of the project to share with neighboring officials, county, state and federal legislators.

"We have to get a concerted effort to get it going," said Bureff. "We'll work it through. We'd love to get a grade separation, that's the ultimate move."

"I think everyone would agree: it would benefit the railroad, it would benefit Huron Township, it would benefit us and it would benefit Metro Airport, too," Wadsworth said.

Environmental issues discussed

Dave Wilson, a member of the Van Buren Township Environmental Coalition, was a speaker at a forum on environmental issues hosted by State Rep. Kristy Pagan (D-Canton) last week.

The event brought together four panelists who discussed issues and answered audience questions including Laura Rubin, executive director of the Huron River Watershed Council; Charlotte Jamieson, policy manager at the Michigan League of Conservation Voters; Andrew Sarpolis, organizing representative for the Sierra Club and Wilson.

"Our state is home to an abundance of natural resources and it is so important that we do everything we can to preserve these resources for future generations," Pagan said. "Protecting our environment has been, and will continue to be, one of my top priorities. It was an honor to be joined by these environmental leaders who work so hard to help protect the health and well-being of the Great Lakes State."

At the forum, Pagan and the panelists discussed several critical issues including energy policy, pipeline safety, and the dangers of runoff contaminants. Panelists agreed that runoff contamination is a serious threat to Michigan waterways and they applauded Pagan's House Bill 574, which aims to protect the state from the hazards of coal-tar based sealants. They also took questions from the audience on a number of other topics including the dangers of the dioxane plume creeping toward one of the main water supplies in the city of Ann Arbor; the importance of companies being environmentally compliant; and what citizens can do to effectively communicate their environmental concerns with their state legislators.

"The turnout was incredible and the conversations were very productive," Pagan said. "I know that these discussions will help foster sound environmental policy in our state. I appreciate everyone who took the time out of their busy schedules to attend, including my four panelists, and I look forward to continuing work on strategies to preserve our environment."

Panelists discuss environmental concerns at a recent forum hosted by State Rep. Kristy Pagan.

CANTON - NORTHVILLE

Opioid abuse is largest new threat

The Canton Police and Fire Departments have joined forces with local community health organizations and Growth Works, Inc., to address opioid abuse, now considered a national epidemic. Opioids are a class of drugs derived from the opium poppy, including morphine, codeine and heroin; they also include synthetics like oxycodone, hydrocodone and the extremely potent fentanyl, a police spokesperson said.

Earlier this year, public safety officials noted a remarkable increase in the number of reported overdoses involving opioid drugs. In 2015, Canton police and fire personnel responded to 23 overdoses, with seven resulting in death. This year-to-date, the departments have already responded to 24 calls of overdoses, with four resulting in death. Of the 47 total overdoses since January 15, 66 percent of the individuals fall into the age bracket of 18-30 years old.

"The increase in runs Canton Public Safety is responding to for individuals experiencing a drug overdose is alarming, and unfortunately aligns with the upward trend being experienced throughout the state and nation," said Public Safety Director Joshua Meier.

Nationwide, heroin overdose deaths have tripled from 2010 to 2013, according to federal prosecutors and the number of deaths from all drug overdoses exceeded 40,000 individuals in 2014.

The intent of the newly-formed partnership in Canton is to attack drug abuse/addiction in the community with a two-pronged approach: police and fire department personnel will continue providing their respective services to the community including educational programs, prosecution of drug offenses, and treatment for overdose patients.

The second prong comes with the new partnership aimed at securing resources for proactive approaches toward reducing drug use and abuse in Canton.

Growth Works, Inc. was recruited to into the partnership as a valuable resource for addicts seeking help.

Growth Works, Inc. is a private, non-profit organization serving youth and families in western Wayne County since 1971. The agency provides innovative chemical dependency and substance abuse programs for addicts and recovering addicts. Growth Works, Inc. can be reached at (734) 495-1722. The agency is also a valuable assistance resource for individuals impacted by a friend or loved-one's addiction.

Opioid abuse has no socio or economic boundaries-addicts are not just street people or junkies—they can be your friends, co-workers or relatives, and their addiction usually results in tragedy for those around them," said Deputy Police Chief Debra Newsome.

Northville police join new accreditation program

The Northville Township Police Department was among the first to join a new accreditation program to ensure enforcement standards.

Following a decision by the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police to adopt a program which would help improve police standards of conduct and standards, Northville agreed to participate. Northville Township Director of Public Safety John Worth is the president of the police chiefs association.

The accreditation program includes 105 standards and departments participating will be required to demonstrate proof of compliance in categories that include administration to use of force.

Worth said that Northville Township was the first agency to apply for the accreditation when the program was announced.

"We look forward to leading the way on the process," Worth said.

Northville Police Sgt. Samantha Bowlin will act as project manager on the accreditation program. Assessors from the police association will be invited to visit the department to review practices and processes to ensure compliance with all the prescribed standards.

Worth said that the accreditation would strengthen the accountability of the department within the community with clearly defined standards of authority, performance and responsibility.

Warm welcome

The Canton Police Department welcomed new police officer Lamar Frederick to the department last week. Frederick took his oath of office with his family in attendance and was congratulated by Township Public Safety Director Josh Meier. All new police officers in Canton are required to successfully complete a 10-week instructor-led field training program, prior to working on their own. This program is designed to orientate and develop recruit officers, maximizing their potential and providing them with the tools necessary to successfully make the transition into their new position as a Canton police officer, officials said.

him without being a qualified fire administrator and the violation of the Open Meetings Act due to the failure of the board members to determine his termination at a public meeting.

"The township manager (Snider) will be handling all personnel issues in this matter," Worth said.

Snider said that the Michigan Risk Management Authority (MIRMA) will respond to the charges and represent Northville Township in the legal proceedings.

"I believe the plaintiff's allegations are incorrect. As the lawsuit discovery process proceeds with interrogatories and depositions there will be ongoing discussions and what will come out," Snider added. "I want the public to know our commitment to provide solid leadership and know that the fire department is in good hands."

Crash severely injures 2

Canton police continue to investigate a two-car collision which seriously injured the drivers of two vehicles May 19.

According to police reports, officers responded to the area of Michigan Avenue at Sheldon Road at about 1:51 p.m. last Thursday. At the scene they observed a 1995 Chevrolet which had been traveling southbound on Sheldon Road that had collided with a 1994 Dodge pickup truck driven by a 17-year-old Belleville resident that had been traveling eastbound on Michigan Avenue. state. He indicated that Faith & Freedom officials would be conducting an investigation into the matter. There is, however, a Faith & Freedom Coalition of Michigan, listed as a 501(c)(4) social welfare nonprofit with a website.

Aun Arbor attorney and political consultant Stu Sandler lists Faith & Freedom Coalition as one of his clients on his website. Sandler is the founder of Hardworking Americans Committee, a political action group. Sandler says he worked with the Hardworking Americans Committee Super PAC and the Faith & Freedom Coalition of Michigan. Berry said that he and Sandler "are friends."

Sandler and Price are political associates and both worked for former Attorney General Mike Cox. Sandler was Cox campaign manager and director of external affairs and Price was his director of constituent relations. Sandler attended Price's swearing-in ceremony when he was appointed as supervisor in Plymouth Township last spring.

"I've never seen anything like this in my career," Heise said.

"It's almost as if I'm running against Stu Sandler. I don't know why he's so intense."

According to Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington (CREW), a Washington D.C. think tank, nationally-minded chapters and state-focused super Political Action Committees (PACs) who raise unlimited sums are required to disclose their donors to the Federal Election Commission (FEC). CREW officials said this means the donors behind any spending by the group on "independent expenditures and issue advocacy" are not secret. "That transparency is easily subverted, however, when contributions are routed through nonprofits that can keep their donors secret." A CREW spokesman offered the example of Hardworking Americans Committee.

"More than half of the group's budget can be traced to dark money groups," CREW reports. The Republican State Leadership Committee (RSLC), a national organization with a focus on electing Republicans to the state level, was the top contributor to Sandler's Hardworking Americans Committee, according to CREW. Financial contributors to the local Faith & Freedom coalition remain unidentified.

Bus monitor faces 3rd sexual misconduct charge

Rocky Perillo, the Plymouth-Canton school bus monitor charged with two felony sexual conduct offenses last week, has been charged with a third and separate offense by a Plymouth Township resident.

According to Plymouth Township Police Lt. Robert Antal, the victim came forward last week after reading about other charges filed against Perillo by parents of a juvenile who was 9-years old at the time of the incident. Perillo was living in Northville Township at the time, police said.

The latest offenses are alleged to have taken place in January of 2011 in Plymouth. The latest charges, like those previously filed, carry a penalty of up to 15 years in prison. Perillo will be arraigned on these charges at the 35th District Court where he entered a not guilty plea last week on the prior charges which did not involve students in the Plymouth Canton district.

Perillo, 46, who has worked for Durham School Services since 2014, was arrested on the initial charges by Northville police. He was arraigned on charges of first-degree criminal sexual conduct involving a person under 13, punishable by a 25-year minimum prison sentence and second-degree criminal sexual conduct involving a person under 13, punishable by a 15-year prison sentence. He pleaded not guilty to both charges at his arraignment.

Perillo now lists his residence as Plymouth Township and the latest incident took place during his time as a home health care provider.

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools and Durham School Services, the outside contractor which provides bus transportation services to the school district, issued a joint statement saying Perillo had been placed on unpaid leave pending the outcome of the criminal investigation.

"Safety is our top priority, and we will continue to keep that as our focus across all areas of our business," the statement reads. "We would like to reassure Plymouth Canton Community Schools parents and members in the community that we have a stringent hiring process for bus drivers and monitors. There are many steps taken before employment, this includes drug and alcohol testing and a criminal background check. Monitors and drivers are also fingerprinted which is sent to the state police who forward the information to the district."

The alleged incidents were not reported until after the employee was hired by Durham and therefore did not show up on his background check," according to the statement.

"The Plymouth Township Police Department encourages anyone who believes they or someone they know who may have been a victim of inappropriate contact with the suspect to contact them at (734) 354-3230," Antal said in a prepared release.

There will be only 14 establishments in downtown Plymouth selling alcohol by the glass.

Members of the Plymouth City Commission approved an alcohol management ordinance last week which maintained the 14 establishment limit, following complaints from business owners regarding a potential parking shortage another license could cause.

Several critics of the plan attended the city commission meeting to continue their opposition to the plan in light of the current parking limitations. While the critics said they do not oppose growth in the community, they want parking available for the clients and customers who visit downtown currently.

Much of the discussion centered on the new Western Market which will be located in the remodeled post office on Penniman Street where owners plan a 90-seat cafe. They requested a transfer of an alcohol by the glass license to allow beer and wine services. The site currently includes 36 parking spaces, more than required by the city for the intended use. The market is expected to open in late June.

Also requesting another license are the owners of the Greek Islands Coney Island on the corner of Main Street and Penniman, a downtown business for more than four years.

Praise church hosts 'Kidz Fest'

Praise Baptist Church will host Kidz Fest & Praise Fest from 3-9 p.m. June 4 on the church grounds.

featuring the band Chosen and artist Sarah Dalton with the PBC Band. The concert, like the children's activities is a free event.

The church is located at 4500 N Territorial Road in Plymouth.

INKSTER - WAYNE - WESTLAND

Budget OK includes plan to meet with retirees

Members of the Wayne City Council may have approved the $15.7 million 2016-2017 budget last week, but a majority of them are hoping to amend the document. The budget was unanimously adopted on the third ballot following a proposal from Councilman Christopher Sanders that the city agree to "enter into earnest discussion with the city retirees within two weeks as an act of good faith to discuss the health care cost issues" in the adopted agreement. The budget as adopted includes a provision requiring retirees to pay 30 percent of their health care premiums and has a 30 percent cap on the portion of any increase the city will pay.

John Zech, the retired city manager who worked for Wayne for 31 years, spoke to the council prior to the adoption and urged them to reconsider this portion of the budget. Zech said that as a city employee, he like many others, was exempt from Social Security contributions and instead was subject to deductions for his pension. He said that many of the retirees affected by this increase would be severely affected as the small city pension they receive is their only source of income.

For some of these people, Zech said, this 30 percent could be half their monthly income.

Zech's remarks followed pleas from other retirees who explained the hardship this would cause them. The retirees stated that they were asking the council and city only to live up to the employment contracts under which they had worked for decades.

Zech suggested that a sliding scale might be effective in alleviating the hardship and would have retirees paying an amount commensurate with their incomes. "I think it's unfair. I know we all have to help but there should be a better way to do it."

Several members of the council apparently shared the concerns of the retirees who spoke at the meeting.

The first two motions to approve the budget failed with Mayor Susan Rowe cautioning the council members that an intervention by the state could be a possibility should they fail to adopt a budget by the second meeting in May.

"That's fine, gentlemen," she said after the second 4-3 vote against the adoption of the budget. "Tomorrow I will make the calls to the state."

Councilman Ryan Gabriel said during the discussion that he could not vote in favor of the budget as presented as the issue was not just numbers. "These are people," he said, referring to the retirees. "They have no more earning potential."

Councilman Richard Sutton said he had serious reservations about the budget, particularly a $800,000 cut in firefighter overtime which he said could eliminate the Mutual Aid agreement and place the city in a precarious position with Westland.

Councilman Tom Porter said the issue was the "hard cap" on city health care contributions. He said that the city has some difficulty in hiring qualified applicants now and had a problem with what this budget would mean to the future of the city.

Councilman John Rhessa said that he had voted no on the last four budgets and was not opposed to a sliding scale but that the city had to do what was "right for the people working for us today. It's embarrassing at this point. There is no money. We will be broke in December of 2017," he said. "We need to do this in the best interest of the city going forward."

Rowe told the council members and the assembled audience, many of whom were retirees, that she "didn't want the city to end up in state hands. We have to pass a budget tonight," she said. "We can look at amendments. We will look at all departments, but we can't continue to function as we have."

She said that with current state laws it will take the city 20 years to return to the revenue level they experienced in 2009.

"There is nobody to help us but the people who live here," she said.

Sanders said that he had previously been ready to support the budget as he understood it was an effort to "stave off" intervention by the state in the form of an emergency manager. He said he agreed that the cut in firefighter overtime "looked good on paper" and the budget "stalls off state intervention" he would not support the 30 percent increase or the 30 percent cap on costs in light of the impact on the retirees.

Councilman Anthony Miller, Rowe and Rhessa cast affirmative votes all three times the budget question was called during the meeting, while Sutton, Porter, Miller and Sanders opposed the budget motion during the first two votes.

Following Sanders' suggestion that a motion to approve negotiations with the retirees prior to approval of the budget, approval from the council was unanimous.

No date for meeting with the retirees was provided.

In presenting the budget, Brian Camiller of Plante Morn, which serves as the outside city finance officer, said, "You can't generate enough income for your expenses."

The $1.5 million structural deficit was met in the budget with the use of $740,000 from the Other Post Employment Benefits fund and the use of $750,000 in the fund balance.

Camiller told the council members and Rowe that the city will run out of money before the end of 2017.

Re-location of city veterans memorials planned

The Westland Department of Public Works building in Westland seems a strange place for a veterans memorial.

But the small marker memorializing POW/MIAs which was formerly located between the old city hall building on Ford Road and the closed Bailey Recreation Center remains in the municipal building awaiting a new home.

Two other veterans memorials are also scheduled to be moved from the Ford Road property and installing them at the memorial garden located behind the William F. Faust Library has been suggested to the city by Ron Schley.

Schley is a member of the Westland Veterans Association which developed and funded the memorial garden. The memorial garden includes a large center memorial and paved walks to coes containing engraved markers.

Westland Mayor William Wild said that no decision has been made about the memorials. There has been a suggestion that the large, covered Vietnam Memorial be moved to the Bova VFW Post. Other suggested locations include the Lions Club Pavilion and the Farmers Market Pavilion area in Tattar Park.

Wild said that the POW/MIA memorial is small enough to move to the veterans garden while the other two structures are larger and would require professional movers to transport and reinstall.

Wild said that the city has been assured that the large memorials can be moved when a new location is finalized.

Inkster parade planned

The 47th Memorial Day Parade in Inkster this year will take a new route through the city.

According to Sandra K. Watley, executive director of the Inkster Citizen Action Network (ICAN) this will be first time in recent years the parade will travel down Michigan Avenue.

The Inkster Citizen Action Network was originally established to address the water rates in the city and has maintained the group to focus on community issues or to sponsor functions, such as the Memorial Day Parade, Watley said.

Members of the group pay an annual $20 fee used to sponsor community initiatives.

This year, the parade route will travel eastbound to Bayham from Hamlin Drive and proceed south on Bayham to Trowbridge and then east on Trowbridge to Inkster City Hall.
