State grants bring 500 jobs to townships

Development grants from the State of Michigan will help bring more than 500 jobs to Northville and Plymouth townships.

The grants, offered as a means to spur economic and job growth, are an incentive available through the Michigan Strategic Fund to encourage investment in local communities, according to State Rep. Kurt Heise, R-Plymouth Township.

One of the latest incentive grants went to ZF North America, Inc., a subsidiary of ZF Friedrichshafen AG headquartered in Germany. The company is a worldwide leader in driveline and chassis technology that is bringing a technical center to Northville Township, Heise said in a prepared statement. The center will be used for research and development services to design, develop and test new vehicle components and systems, and is expected to create 571 jobs, resulting in a $4 million Michigan Business Development Program performance-based grant.

“This is an exciting development,” said Heise. “I’m grateful for the partnership between ZF North America and the township of Northville, and I thank the Michigan Economic Development Corporation and Michigan Strategic Fund for seeing the great value in this hard-working American community.”

The Michigan Strategic Fund also granted approval of private activity bonds that would create 82 new jobs in Plymouth Township and the city of Livonia with Master Automatic Machine Co., Inc. The state investment was valued at $4 million.

“Bringing greater success to local businesses is just as important as encouraging additional investment,” Heise said. “Economic success in our state starts with job providers based in our cities and townships.”

Painting the town Art In The Park opens tomorrow

Art In The Park organizers Raychel Rork and Dianne Quinn will mark the 36th anniversary of the renowned event this year by presenting a special gift to another facility that promotes the arts.

Art In The Park officially arrives throughout downtown Plymouth at 10 a.m. tomorrow when more than 400 artists will exhibit and sell their wares in the annual weekend dedicated to art and artists. The event is open until 8 p.m. tomorrow, from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Sunday.

This year, the children's mural, a long-time tradition at Art In The Park, will be donated to the new Plymouth Arts & Recreation Complex (PARC) now open at the former Central Middle School.

More than 1,000 children will work on three large mural panels, each 4 by 6 feet, which will be installed at the new complex following Art In The Park this year.

The Kid's Mural has been a part of the art show for decades and every year Quinn and Rork choose a special spot for the completed artwork, which is always spectacular. This year, the theme of the individual mural panels will be Sports, Music and Dance, an effort to try to combine and recognize all the activities that will be included at the new facility, Rork said. She and Quinn agreed that the painting of the mural is a very popular activity with youngsters visiting Art In The Park. The basic outline is drawn on the panels which are then taken to the Kids' Section in Kellogg Park, ready for painting. Children visiting the festival are encouraged to take up a brush and paint any section they might like and there are volunteers on hand to help them complete their artistic efforts.

"It's always been popular and the kids are so much fun," Quinn said.

Following the festival and completion of the mural panels, they will be installed at the Activities Entrance of the new complex housed in the renovated and remodeled Central Middle School building on Main Street in downtown Plymouth. The Plymouth Arts & Recreation Complex (PARC) is already operating, offering expanded summer swimming programs along with the use of the athletic fields and the gymnasium.

"We are open for the community," said Wendy Harless of the PARC committee.

"The PARC is offering a second session of swim lessons this summer. That means there is still time for you and your children to learn how to swim before summer ends," she said.

"We also offer a Masters program, adult learn to swim classes, workout classes and private lessons for all ages," she added.

Convicted 'steel drum 'killer' to spend life in prison

Scott Wobbe, 38, of Westland will spend the rest of his life in prison without the possibility of parole following his no contest plea to charges of first-degree premeditated murder in the death of his former girlfriend.

Macomb County Judge Mary Chrzanowski handed down Wobbe's sentence June 30 following the plea he entered in May to the charges. Chrzanowski also ordered Wobbe to pay the mother of Theresa DeKeyzer $9,450 in restitution and have no contact with the family of the 22-year-old victim.

DeKeyzer's decomposed body was found by police in a steel drum filled with cement, covered with plastic and sealed with duct tape in a Plymouth Township storage yard in September of last year. She was reported missing by her family in June, 2014 after a domestic violence incident in Warren involving Wobbe.

Police indicated that DeKeyzer died of asphyxiation. Wobbe was charged with her murder, disinterment and mutilation of her body. He entered the unusual no-contest plea in an effort to save his and DeKeyzer's family the ordeal of a trial, according to his attorney, Raymond Cassar.

Wobbe apologized to DeKeyzer's family and his own family members, Cassar said. He added that Wobbe is not an evil person and has had remorse throughout the legal proceedings.

At the sentencing, about 50 supporters of DeKeyzer and her family filled the courtroom, many wearing purple and black Justice for Theresa shirts. DeKeyzer's mother and some family members spoke about the impact her death had on them and Wobbe read from a prepared statement.

The no-contest plea prevents an appeal of the sentence without first receiving permission to do so from the court.

Spotlight Players seeking cast for The Producers

Spotlight Players will cast The Producers, the opening musical in the 2015-2016 main season, at 6:30 p.m. July 20 and 21 at the Village Theater in Canton Township.

A cult classic and the epitome of in-your-face and equal-opportunity-offender humor, The Producers, was originally written and directed by Mel Brooks, starring Gene Wilder and Zero

Mostel. The play is now a big Broadway musical- premiering with stars Matthew Broderick and Nathan Lane -winning a record-breaking 12 Tony Awards and touring internationally.

Characters Leo Bloom and Max Bialystock devise a get-rich quick scheme that is sure to make them millions. All the down-on-his-luck producer and the mild-mannered accountant need to do is produce a sure-fire Broadway flop. Swindling little old ladies out of millions of back-old-dollars and finding the worst script ever written is only the beginning of this fiasco when something goes terribly wrong: the show turns out to be a scintillating success.

The Producers takes the main stage for six performances Sept. 18-20 and 25-27, with Friday and Saturday performances at 8 p.m. and Sunday performances at 2 p.m.

Spotlight Players is looking for a wide array of cast members ages 15 and older. Actors younger than 18 must have the parental permission form signed. Actors should bring a completed audition form with a non-returnable photograph attached.

Auditions will consist of selected songs from The Producers, cold readings from the script and a short choreographed dance. Performers should wear comfortable clothes and shoes in which to audition.

All performers in the show must become Spotlight Members ($35). More information about auditions can be found at <http://spotlightplayersmi.org/2015-2016-season/the-producers/>.

Oakwood Wayne opens new cardiac laboratory

The past met the future last week in the recently upgraded cardiac catheterization laboratory at Oakwood Hospital Wayne.

Mansoor Naini, MD, FACC, performed in the first procedure in the new lab last week. Naini also performed the first procedure in the laboratory at the Wayne hospital 15 years ago when the catheterization equipment was first installed.

The hospital spent about $1.2 million in adding a second lab which includes an upgrade of the equipment in order to improve efficiencies, reduce operating costs, enhance patient care and address any overflow of cardiac cases.

"This will be a significant improvement," said Chandrakant Pujara, MD, FACC, an Oakwood-affiliated cardiologist with offices in Wayne and Canton Township. "This will provide us better service and better imagery than our old equipment-which was 15 years old."

The renovation brought all new-state of the art equipment into the lab, including new lighting, storage units, and C arm with multi-directional table. The old monitors were replaced with a high definition panel that includes four screens to give surgeons a better look at the heart and its surrounding area. Pujara said the upgraded imaging equipment will help improve patient outcomes.

"When you're doing an intervention, it is essential to accurately gage the size of the lesion," he said. "This new equipment will allow us to provide the very best in patient care."

All the needed equipment will now be stored within the lab, which will help improve efficiencies and reduce costs. The upgrade will soon allow cardiologists to provide a new service to patients, too: Electrophysiology (EP) ablation, which is a process where electrophysiology equipment is used to scar small areas of the heart to treat abnormal heart rhythms.

"Oakwood has a long history of providing the highest level of care to the community," said Mohamad Kabbani, MD, an interventional cardiologist with offices in Canton and Dearborn. Kabbani is the director of the catheterization laboratory at Oakwood Hospital - Wayne. "These new improvements will allow us to further enhance the care we provide."

Norwayne revitalization effort wins recognition

A neighborhood originally built during World War II to house bomber plant workers was honored with a national award this year.

The renovation efforts at the Norwayne Historic District in Westland received an honorable mention during the recent U.S. Conference of Mayors meeting in San Francisco when the 2015 national City Livability Awards were presented.

The neighborhood, originally built to house about 2,000 workers at the Willow Run B-24 plant, had residential units, an elementary school, a fire house, a church, a municipal building and even small businesses when it was constructed as part of the Arsenal for Democracy program.

The neighborhood had fallen into decline and in 2009, Westland Mayor William Wild named the area as a target of revitalization for the city. The efforts were rewarded in 2013 when the community received national historical designation and was named to the Register of National Historic Places.

Federal Neighborhood Stabilization and Community Development Block Grant funding was used for renovation of homes in the area, the demolition of some buildings and houses, the addition of green space, improvements to roads, sidewalks, water and sewer upgrades and the improvement of parks in the historic neighborhood. The vacant elementary school in the neighborhood is being renovated into the Jefferson Barns Community Vitality Center and will house a library, the Norwayne boxing facility, a volunteer library and Nankin Transit.

"The successes of the revitalization efforts are due to the collaboration among government, schools, churches, nonprofit organizations and community residents," Westland Mayor William Wild said. "Our focus has been improving the quality of life for our residents and that is why we have focused on economic development, enhancing parks and recreation as well as implementing programs that improve the health and well-being of our residents."

Surprise, surprise

Fred and Maureen Robinson got quite a surprise June 26 when the lawn at their Hillcrest Avenue home in Plymouth was decorated with good wishes on their 50th wedding anniversary. For the past half century, the couple has exchanged the same greeting card on their anniversary on which another memory is recorded in their life story. This year, daughter, Julie Evans of Virginia, and son, Jeff Robinson of Sag Harbor, New York, surprised their parents with this special anniversary tribute. The couple has lived in Plymouth for almost their entire married life and raised both their children in the community. Fred Robinson was a volunteer fireman in Plymouth for 25 years and taught middle school in Livonia, while his wife taught second grade at Miller Elementary School. Now retired, the couple travels, winters in Florida and spends time with their grandchildren.

Art

The school building is steeped in tradition in Plymouth and when the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education made the difficult decision to close the school, the grassroots organization supporting an effort to preserve the building and use it as a new arts and recreation complex evolved.

Quinn said dedicating the children's mural to the PARC facility seemed a natural thing to do considering the involvement in the arts planned at the building.

The Michigan Philharmonic will be moving into the new PARC structure early next month, Harless said, and several other civic groups are considering moving to offices on the second floor of the facility. Committee members said they also expect to have music, theater and dance performances, along with visual art exhibits at the building.

When that happens, audiences will be welcomed by the sight of the latest mural completed this year by the youngest artists at Art In The Park.

Again this year, Art In The Park will also feature live entertainment, interactive displays and a park full of children's activities, including junior artists selling their creations.

Comedian John Park will return with his comedy, juggling and plate spinning to entertain crowds all weekend, along with local jazz guitarist Ron Hark and the famous living mural and chalk mural creations.

Rork stressed again the availability of the shuttle service in roomy, air-conditioned buses from the former Visteon parking lot to downtown which will operate continuously all weekend. The buses, sponsored by St. John Providence, "really are the best way to see the event," Rork said.

Other sponsors of Art In The Park this year include Ford Motor Co., Xfinity, Art Van Pure Sleep, Majic Windows, Independence Village, Renewal by Andersen and Brackney Chiropractic.

(A schedule, map and list of artists can be found in a special section included in this edition of The Eagle.)

Car wash set

The Northville High School SADD (Students Against Destructive Decisions) group is planning a car wash fundraiser at the Northville Fire Station, across from the high school, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Saturday, July 18.

All funds will be donated to Northville Civic Concern. For more information, contact Shubham Shedge at nhssadd@gmail.com.

BELLEVILLE - INKSTER - ROMULUS

Third lawsuit filed in Inkster beating incident

More legal action has resulted from the traffic-stop beating of a motorist in Inkster Jan. 28.

One of the officers involved in the arrest of Floyd Dent, seen on the patrol-car videotape that became an internet sensation, has now filed suit against the City of Inkster, City Manager Richard Marsh and Police Chief Joe Thomas.

The officer, Phillip (Chuck) Randazzo, was suspended for his participation in the arrest during which another officer, William Melendez, struck Dent at least 16 times in the head and face with his closed fist while restraining the 55-year-old man in a choke hold. Melendez was fired by Inkster and now faces criminal charges based on the videotape evidence. All charges against Dent, including resisting arrest and drug possession, were dropped by Wayne County Prosecutor Kym Worthy when the patrol car videotape was released to the media by Dent's attorney, Greg Rohl.

Randazzo, a 20-year veteran of the Inkster department and the president of the officers' union, is represented in the lawsuit by attorney Tom Pabst. The suit claims that Randazzo was cleared of any misconduct in the arrest of Dent and was also cleared of any wrongdoing in a subsequent videotape of officers in the police station apparently mocking Dent. The suit claims his suspension was unwarranted and "an effort to smear" him, according to his attorney.

On the patrol car video of the arrest, Randazzo is seen kicking Dent twice and the station video shows him walking to a bench in what appears to be a booking room, lying down and lifting up his arm in a position comparable to Dent's physical position during his arrest.

In both instances, internal investigations performed by the Inkster Police Department exonerated Randazzo. Both were performed under the supervision of former Police Chief Vickie Yost who subsequently resigned her position.

Randazzo was suspended for 15 days, however, "for the use of excessive force" and bringing the department disrepute. Another officer, Sgt. Shawn Kritzer, was also suspended for 30 days for neglect of duty in not getting Dent immediate medical attention.

Randazzo claims in his lawsuit that the city released the video of the arrest in a deliberate attempt to smear him while an appeal of a separate 2013 lawsuit is pending. In that lawsuit, Randazzo alleged he was mistreated by the city as he was a whistleblower and he was awarded $125,000. The city is appealing that decision and Randazzo's attorney has stated that he suspects the suspension in the Dent incident was part of an effort at retaliation by the city. In the suit, Randazzo claims the videotape was released to the media in an effort to smear him. Dent's attorney, however, has stated emphatically that he released the videotape to the media.

To date, Inkster officials have announced a new tax levy of 6.45 mills to pay the court settlement of $1,377,500 to Dent and an additional .47 mill to pay DeShawn Acklin $100,000 to settle his claims of police brutality in another incident that also involved Melendez. The millage levies will cost the owners of an Inkster home valued at $55,000 about $192.

No amount of damages sought was listed in Randazzo's suit.

Spirit Airlines to invest $3 million

Spirit Airlines, Inc. is constructing a new maintenance hangar at Detroit Metropolitan Airport with support from the Michigan Strategic Fund. The project is expected to generate $31.7 million in new private investment and add 84 new jobs.

"Michigan's economy is soaring ahead, and this new investment by Spirit Airlines underscores Michigan's greatly improved business climate and a talent pool that can compete with any place in the world," said Michigan Economic Development Corp. Chief Executive Officer Steve Arwood. "It is through the efforts of the City of Romulus and the Wayne County Airport Authority that these well-paying jobs are coming to Michigan residents, and we are pleased to support that collaboration."

Spirit Airlines, Inc., a low-fare airline based in Miramar, FL, was founded in 1964 in Michigan as Clippert Trucking Co. Plans include the construction of a new 126,000 square foot commercial airline maintenance hangar at a cost of about $31.7 million. The reported 84 new jobs will be related to commercial airline maintenance and repair. As a result, the project has been awarded a $1 million Michigan Business Development Program performance based grant. Michigan was chosen over a competing site in Texas. The city of Romulus has offered support to the project in the form of property tax abatement, according to a prepared statement.

"Spirit has a long and proud history with Michigan and specifically Detroit Metropolitan, Wayne County Airport," said Spirit Airlines President and CEO Ben Balanza.

"This new hangar will allow our maintenance technicians to more efficiently and more effectively service our planes in a controlled environment. We're also excited that Spirit will be bringing additional jobs to this community."

"The city of Romulus is proud to be a part of Spirit Airlines' expansion and investment at Detroit Metropolitan Airport," said Romulus Mayor LeRoy D. Burcroff. "The incentives we are offering will bring more jobs and investment to not only Romulus, but all southeast Michigan."
