Does radioactive waste pose local threat?

While Van Buren Township residents protested the dumping of radioactive fracking waste in their community during a meeting last week, officials from the Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) are considering a request to increase the allowable radiation levels of waste accepted at the facility.

An application from the owners of the Wayne Disposal landfill in Van Buren Township to increase the level of radiation in waste received at the site was submitted to the DEQ last October, prior to widespread reports of the radioactive material being shipped to the Wayne Disposal site from out-of-state fracking operations. The level for radiation in Michigan is set at 50

CSX, according to the Federal Railway Administration, had more than 200 derailments and accidents in 2012.

picocuries, which is 100 times greater than naturally occurring levels, according to State Rep. Douglas Geiss (D-Taylor). Geiss and State Rep. Dian Slavens (D-Canton) have introduced a bill which would ban the practice of other states' dumping fracking byproduct in Michigan.

According to state records, Michigan Disposal has been cited for multiple safety violations during the past nine years. Violations included a leak in the hazardous waste landfill protective liner; toxic leachate spills into surface water; improper venting and monitoring of stored underground hazardous waste; disposing of hazardous waste in non-hazardous landfill locations and failing to control chemical reactions during processing causing at least nine fires in the past nine years. The site was, however, granted permission to nearly double the size of the landfill in 2012.

In Pennsylvania and Ohio, the limit on radiation in waste matter is 5 picocuries which prompted the shipping of 36 tons of radioactive waste to the landfill in Van Buren. Those states cannot obtain federal permits for the dumping of the radioactive material as it exceeds the state picocuries limit.

Concern over the hazards of hauling dangerous, flammable and toxic rail cargo through the surrounding Plymouth, Northville and Canton communities remains a topic of discussion, now compounded by the potential railroad transport of radioactive waste. Plymouth, a major railroad intersection, is the daily route of trains regularly transporting hazardous materials

Township residents file recall petitions against 4

Petition language has been submitted to Wayne County election officials for approval of ballot language to recall four Plymouth Township officials. A hearing before a three-judge panel was scheduled this week to review the proposed ballot language prepared by residents for clarity and factuality.

If approved by the three-judge panel, residents led by former Plymouth Township Deputy Clerk Sandra Groth, will circulate the petitions to recall Plymouth Township Supervisor Richard Reaume, Treasurer Ron Edwards, Clerk Nancy Conzelman and Trustee Kay Arnold.

Residents would be required to collect a minimum of 3,190 township voters' signatures, or 25 percent of the voter turnout in the 2010 election, on the recall petitions for each of the four board members, if the language is approved. Last week, Groth and township resident

Ken Garner filed the recall petitions and issued individual notices to the four township officials.

Citing blatant disrespect and failure to respond to residents' repeated requests and concerns, the group wants to remove the officials from office as soon as possible. At issue is what the recall group describes as the lack of transparency and poor leadership. In August the board attempted to change the meeting rules to disallow public comments from being posted to the minutes, but could not come to agreement.

Christopher Hunter, a township resident who has recently challenged board members' decisions regarding the new amphitheater, said the proposed meeting rules regarding minutes are not needed.

"It seems to fly in the face of every basic principle of democracy we have," Hunter said. "If you want things to be civil and professional then you have open dialogue and invite everyone to the table."

Hunter said the recall was not only about the amphitheater which has prompted numerous citizen protests and criticism of officials. "This isn't just about the amphitheater," Hunter said.

Township residents have filled township hall board meetings in recent months, written to newspapers and used to social media to express their dislike for a $850,000 pavilion and $350,000 amphitheater set to be built in the 80-acre McClumpha Park which backs up to a quiet neighborhood with upscale homes.

In April, the board voted 4-3 to hire an architecture-engineering firm to commence the work on the amphitheater during a confrontational exchange of views where residents claim their objections and concerns were again ignored and dismissed by the officials.

Residents claim there was no feasibility study or business plan, no revenue or expense projections and that they were denied their right to vote on the issue. They say township officials promised a survey to determine recreational interest but that has not happened.

"These are the same people who refused to allow residents to vote on a millage question to fund a fire department. This is the township, under their leadership, that now depends on a skeleton crew of firefighters, and an Ann Arbor-based ambulance company. Our rights are being violated," said Susan Bondie, chairperson of Plymouth Concerned Citizens.

"This is going to require a lot of work and a lot of people willing to work." Said Groth who is now conducting training classes for the petition circulators. "We're going to get this done, and we're going to do it the right way."

Woman charged in shooting death

A 43-year-old Van Buren Township resident was arraigned on second-degree murder and felony firearm charges Monday in 34th District Court.

Judge Tina Brooks Green ordered Diane Letice Orr held without bond and scheduled a preliminary court hearing for her on the charges for Sept. 17 before 34th District Judge Brian Oakley.

The charges stemmed from an incident which occurred at about 10 a.m. Sept. 5 at the Green Meadows Apartments. Van Buren Township police officers and Huron Valley Ambulance were dispatched to the 11500 block of Meadows Court after reports of a domestic dispute that involved shots being fired, according to police reports. When officers arrived at the scene they found 23-year-old Renard Lumpika suffering from an apparent gunshot wound. Van Buren Township personnel and Huron Valley Ambulance paramedics performed advanced life saving procedures but were unable to revive the victim who was pronounced dead at the scene.

Officers secured the scene and also located two people of interest who were seated in a vehicle in the immediate area of the apartment, according to police reports.

The Wayne County Medical Examiner's office took possession of the deceased and is scheduled to conduct an autopsy to determine the exact cause and manner of his death, according to police reports.

The Van Buren Township

Police Department initiated preliminary investigative actions to secure possible witnesses as well as preserve and secure physical evidence. During the course of the investigation, Van Buren Township officers arrested Orr and transported her to the police department where she was processed and lodged pending the presentation of a warrant request to the Wayne County Prosecutor.

Anyone with questions or concerns about the incident is asked to contact Lt. Kenneth Floro at including chlorine, cyclohexane, methyl ethyl ketone, butadiene, crude oil and potentially radioactive waste to the Van Buren site.

Last May, after upgrades and scheduled repairs to railroad crossings in Plymouth appeared stalled, The Eagle contacted CSX Railroad officials about the delay and inquired about hazardous shipments. Some local residents had expressed concern regarding the conditions of the rails throughout the area following the train accident in Lynchburg, VA when crude oil tanker cars derailed, forcing the evacuation of a large part of the downtown area along the James River, a short distance from office buildings and homes.

CSX would not reveal the number of railroad tanker cars carrying hazardous or flammable materials throughout the local area but contend that such information would be available to public safety officials, should they request it. Carla Groleau, CSX communications director, would only say "CSX supports the safe transportation and handling of materials with infrastructure maintenance and improvements, technology and training."

CSX, according to the Federal Railway Administration, had more than 200 derailments and accidents in 2012.

Northville Township Fire Chief Rich Marinucci, who heads up the Western Wayne County Fire Department Mutual Aid Association (WWFDMAA) Haz-Mat Team says they are constantly training and preparing for potential emergencies including those involving the railroads. Marinucci who describes his team as "out-standing" said, "While it is not possible to predict every emergency scenario, the team is very good at what they do, one of the top teams anywhere, certainly in the State of Michigan."

The head of the National Transportation Safety Board recently said the nation's railroads could pose a catastrophic threat to the U.S. population, speaking after a CSX train in Indianapolis carrying a half-a-million-pound container designed to haul spent nuclear waste crashed into a truck loaded with pineapple.

During a meeting last week, Van Buren Township residents questioned the wisdom of allowing the dumping of radioactive waste at the Wayne Disposal site, in such close proximity to the Huron River watershed. Van Buren Township Supervisor Linda Combs said in an earlier interview that she was confident in the safety procedures at the dumping site.

"I am absolutely confident that they (EQ) are not doing anything to endanger the public," she said prior to the meeting last week. She said the radiation levels are nearly undetectable and do not affect dump site employees.

Officials from Environmental Quality, the owners of the Wayne Disposal site, announced Aug. 25 that they would voluntarily suspend receipt of the radioactive waste scheduled to be shipped from Pennsylvania until a panel named by Gov. Rick Snyder could investigate the situation. There has been no timeframe announced for any such probe and no public announcement of any appointments to the panel at press time.

"Wayne Disposal has worked cooperatively with the MDEQ and the local community for many years and will continue to support a strong working relationship with them based on sound science and transparency," said Simon Bell, executive vice president of operations for EQ in a prepared release.

ROMULUS

Council adopts Wayne County Hazard plan

In a city hall powered by portable generators in a community where as many as 5,000 residents were still without electricity, the Romulus City Council unanimously adopted a five-year Wayne County Hazard Mitigation Plan.

The plan, developed every five years, is designed to identify potential hazards within the community and create a process to address them, should the need arise. It is also necessary to adopt the plan in order to receive funding to recover from natural disasters through the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

“Obviously within the past week, we’ve seen some of these issues in our community,” said Romulus Mayor Leroy Burcroff.

Businesses at the corner of Wayne Road and Goddard were still without electricity following Friday night’s storm, which knocked out power to nearly 500,000 residents of southeastern Michigan.

Prepared by Asti Environmental, Inc. of Brighton, the plan was completed with assistance from the Wayne County Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Management with input from the 42 communities within the county. The goal of the plan, which was first developed in 2005, is to limit the loss of life and property from hazards that occur in the community, said Kevin Krause, Romulus’ deputy fire chief.

In Romulus, the areas of concern included severe storms and the associated flooding and power outages associated with them, as well as extreme temperatures in the summer and winter along with the lack of overnight warming or cooling centers. Metro Airport was listed as a possible target for terrorism and the presence of industrial storage facilities near the airport, railroads and highways created the potential for a hazardous material emergency, according to Krause.

To help prepare for potential emergencies, Krause said the city was: encouraging family disaster planning, updating GIS databases, establishing regional retention/detention ponds and upgrading sewer mains to help prevent flooding, expanding the early warning system, inspecting and maintaining a record of all hazardous material facilities and working with railway owners/operators to improve transportation planning.

They are also developing traffic control alternatives during power outages, working on shelter agreements with the school district and have already provided generators and internet access at all key municipal buildings as evidenced by the lights, cameras and air conditioning that were all working for the meeting Monday night.

City ‘Books in the Park’ program will continue

Mayor Leroy Burcroff said the Books in the Park program would continue, despite a minor “hiccup.”

The program, modeled after one in the City of Novi and other communities, provided a place for books in two of the recently re-opened parks, in boxes constructed by the city Department of Public Works. Working with

Library Director Patty Braden, he said he brought the program to Romulus so that when children or their parents came to the parks, they could use the books while they were there and return them afterward. The books were not part of the library regular circulation or inventory, he added. They were donated separately for the Books in the Park program. The program was initiated in Mary Ann Banks Park and Fernandez Park.

“It’s a great concept,” said Burcroff. “It’s working well at one of the parks. We did have a little hiccup already in Mary Ann Banks Park. Unfortunately we had someone who took some of the books and destroyed them in the restrooms and some of the rest of the park.”

The city has seen similar incidents of vandalism as other parks were brought back on line, and Burcroff said, like in those other incidents, the community would step up and alert officials to what was going on so they could stop it.

“I know it’s a just a few people doing this that draws attention to these things, but it was disheartening to the library it was disheartening to my staff,” said Burcroff as he appealed to the community last Monday. “As a community let’s take ownership of these parks and make sure that, when we make that investment and put the time into them that the parks are there so that everyone can enjoy them.

WAYNE

Wayne names delegate to 'fire authority' group

Wayne City Councilman Skip Monit will represent the city on a newly established committee to study the feasibility of a combined fire authority serving Wayne, Westland and Inkster.

The Wayne and Westland fire departments were combined in 2012 and share a single fire chief, Michael Reddy, and are represented by the same union. Reddy also served, briefly, as the fire chief in Inkster. He was replaced by John Adams who retired from the Westland Department this summer and assumed the chief's duties in Inkster.

Monit said the group will meet and gather information to determine the feasibility of a combined department which could, eventually, include other communities. The merger of the Wayne and Westland departments has, according to city officials, saved both communities money.

The merger of the Wayne and Westland departments has,
according to city officials,
saved both communities money.

A council person from each community will be appointed to the new committee, although Westland and Inkster have not yet named their representatives. Reddy has been assessing the situation to determine if the goal of enhanced service and decreased expense is possible through an authority.

Should the decision be made to pursue an authority, it would require voter approval required by state law.

Once established, the committee is also expected to meet with legal counsel to determine exactly what would be required to form the authority, officials said.

City names police officer of the year

A 17-year veteran of the department has been named as the 2014 Wayne Police Officer of the Year.

Stephanie Strasser, who joined the three-person Wayne detective bureau only last year, was chosen by the department citation board members for the honor this year. She was nominated by her fellow officers for the honor, following her investigation of the robbery at Leo's Jewelry on Michigan Avenue which took place in 2013.

During the presentation of the plaques and awards given to Strasser to commemorate her selection, she was joined by her husband, Christopher, a Dearborn police officer and their four children at a meeting of the Wayne City Council members. Strasser's father was also a law enforcement officer, serving with the Michigan State Police for 25 years.

Police Chief Jason Wright noted at the meeting that he had worked with Strasser on many calls during the years and said that during her time in the detective bureau she had contributed significantly to decreasing the case load.

"It's really a special night for me as chief and an officer to recognize her for her work," Wright said.

"She truly deserves being called Wayne's finest. This really highlights how great a job Stephanie did in 2013 and for many years. She's a consummate professional," Wright said during the presentation at the city council meeting.

Correction

In a recent news article regarding a pending lawsuit against Wayne City Councilman Skip Monit, it was erroneously stated that the councilman referred to community activist Christopher Sanders by name while he made comments about inappropriate conduct at the HalloWayne event in 2013.

Monit did not refer to Sanders by name during the council meeting when he made the comments regarding the event.

PLYMOUTH - WESTLAND

Weather closes Fall Festival early Friday

The Friday night storms took a heavy toll on the activities at the Plymouth Fall Festival sending visitors scurrying for shelter to avoid heavy rain, high winds and lightning.

Festival President Eric Joy said it was necessary to close the rides and all the attractions at the event and clear Kellogg Park when high winds and rain began about 8 p.m. Shortly after, a 30-foot tree at the edge of the park was felled by the winds, narrowly missing a children's ride and a nearby booth.

Joy said the city DPS arrived on the scene almost immediately after the rain stopped and had the large tree trunk, almost 3 1/2 feet across in places, sawed into manageable lengths and carted off.

"We weren't going to take any chance on anybody getting hurt," Joy said. "We closed all the rides, the midway and all the booths."

The Taste Fest, a highlight of the community celebration, was scheduled to end at 8 p.m. but Rob Costanza, owner of Station 885 in Old Village, which hosted the event as a benefit for the Civitans, said he had restaurants pack up a little early because of the weather. Costanza had also planned to have the Wile E. Coyote band continue to play in the outdoor garden setting until 10, but sent everyone home as a safety precaution.

The Party Tent, behind E.G. Nick's restaurant was also rained out on Friday night due to the weather, noted owner Frank Agostini, who is also the vice president of the festival committee.

"We had a great night on Saturday," Agostini said. "It certainly didn't make up for Friday, but we had a nice crowd."

James Geitzen, the owner of JAG Entertainment, who booked the bands and professional entertainment for Kellogg Park, agreed. "It was a good crowd Saturday night," he said, "not enough to make up for Friday, but Saturday was a good day and Sunday was very steady all day."

The A.M. Rotary Club served a record number of spaghetti dinners on Saturday and the Noon Rotary Club sold more than 10,500 chicken dinners Sunday, according to initial reports.

Funding for the festival, provided primarily by both sponsorships and a revenue split with the amusement rides is dependent on crowd participation.

Without large crowds, paying the expenses for the festival can be difficult, Joy explained in an earlier interview. Geitzen, who directed the sponsorship efforts this year, noted that those donations had increased dramatically. "I think we'll make it and be very close to breaking even," Geitzen said Sunday afternoon, "but we have to wait until all the numbers are in."

City receives upgrade in fire safety rating

The City of Plymouth recently received an improved rating from the Insurance Service Office, Inc. (ISO) following an evaluation of the city fire services.

Mayor Dan Dwyer said that the city rating had been upgraded from a 5 to a 4.

"The improved ISO Public Protection Classification Code as a result of our partnership for fire services may help residents and businesses as most insurance companies use the ISO classification as one factor in their rate determination formulas for personal and business insurance," Dwyer said.

The ISO, a subsidiary of Verisk Analytics, is a provider of data, underwriting, risk management and legal/regulatory services (with special focus on community fire-protection efforts and Building Code Effectiveness Evaluation) to property-casualty insurers and other clients.

According to City Manager

Paul Sincock, this is the first time that the City of Plymouth has been independently evaluated by the ISO since the city formed a partnership with the City of Northville in January 2012 to provide fire services.

According to the ISO, the company has rated just over 49,000 fire departments nationally and the new rating for the City of Plymouth would place the city fire services in the top 17 percent nationally.

Sincock indicated that the ISO did a comprehensive review of not only the fire department, but also the City Department of Municipal Services Water Division and the Emergency Communications Center that the city shares with Plymouth Township.

"This improved rating is a result of the team efforts and professionalism in all of our operations of the fire department, municipal services, Huron Valley Ambulance and township dispatch center," he said.

This improved rating would not have been possible without the dedication of everyone involved."

He added that the administrative team in the city will be reviewing the ISO Report in detail in the coming weeks as well as the 2013 ICMA (Inter City/County Management Association) report to continue to develop a long-term strategic plan for city fire services.

Blues, Brews and Barbecue begins tomorrow

The Soul Men, a Blues Brothers tribute band, and a slate of other popular local bands will put the "blues" into this year's All-American Blues, Brews, and Barbecue event in Westland this weekend.

This year, the event will take place at the new Farmers Market Pavilion, located at 1901 S. Carlson.

The Friday entertainment schedule includes The Randy Brock Group at 6 p.m. The band was formed in 1996 as a power trio with Randy Brock on guitar, Mike Rowe on Bass and Brian Deming on the drums. The line-up now features Felice Bernardara on drums and Karl Goebel on keys.

At 8 p.m. The Soul Men will perform a tribute to Joliet Jake and Elwood Blues. The Soul Men's persona is an uncanny resemblance to The Blues Brothers. Dressed in black from head to toe, displaying finger tattoos, The Soul Men perform all the favorite Blues Brothers songs.

The Soul Men

At noon Saturday, The Big Bill Harwell Band, fronted by singer/guitar player William "Big Bill" Harwell, will perform.

At 2 p.m. The Chris Canas Band will take to the stage. Canas wants to take the blues to the younger generation and keep it alive for veteran fans.

The Alligators will entertain beginning at 4 p.m. The band has been playing the blues, in their own unmistakable way, for 28 years. This "attitude" they bring to the stage each night has everything to do with their respect for the blues and their love of playing it together as a band.

The Boa Constrictors, an International touring act, hand-assembled band from Detroit's very best musicians, will play at 6 p.m. All of the members came from the cores of many of the very best Blues bands that Detroit has to offer.

At 8 p.m. Big Ray and The Motor City Kings, a Detroit Area musical group performing soul, rock, blues and Motown favorites, will entertain crowds.

Friday night is also Bike Night at the All-American Blues, Brews, and Barbecue event. Bikes will get front row parking privileges on Friday and non-bikers are welcome to view all the bikes in the designated bike lot, according to a prepared release from the city.

Reflections Custom Cycles of Ypsilanti also plans to debut some of their best work yet for the opening night of Blues, Brews, and Barbecue.

Participating restaurants this year include Ashley's Beer and Grill; Hickory BBQ, Beaver Creek, Kona Ice, Max &

Erma's, Famous Dave's, Longhorn Steakhouse, Texas Roadhouse and Biggy Coffee.

Every day an expanding selection of craft beers and cocktails...

Hearing in assault case scheduled for tomorrow

Two women charged with threatening an Inkster co-worker in a restaurant parking lot Aug. 14 will face a preliminary hearing at the 35th District Court in Plymouth tomorrow.

The charges against Antoinette Hope Boone, 37, of Canton Township include two counts of felonious assault and one count each of carrying a concealed weapon and felony firearm. Her cousin, Alyah Chaurice Tooson-Boone, 19, of Inkster, faces a single charge of felonious assault, according to court records.

The charges stem from an incident reported to Canton Police at about 11:30 p.m. Sept. 12 by a 30-year-old Inkster woman who said the pair threatened her with a gun and a chain outside the McDonald's restaurant near Michigan Avenue and Lotz Road in Canton.

The woman told the responding police officers that the pair, in a car along with a man who was not charged in the incident, had been harassing her, swerving into her lane, throwing objects at her car and yelling at her as she drove her vehicle down Michigan Avenue on her way home from work in Ypsilanti. She told officers that Boone was a co-worker with whom she had issues previously, including slashed tires on her vehicle. She said she drove into the McDonald's parking lot where she was to meet a friend and the other women followed.

The woman told officers she retrieved a baseball bat from her car to protect herself. She told officers that Boone threatened her with a .40 caliber handgun and that Tooson-Boone made threats with a chain. The friend of the alleged victim told police that she, too, had been threatened by Boone and Tooson-Boone.

The Inkster woman told police that she lives in fear of Boone who was previously involved in a romantic relationship with a man she is now dating and that all three work for the same employer.

No shots were fired during the altercation and police confiscated both a .40 caliber handgun and a chain at the scene. Boone and Tooson-Boone were arrested and arraigned Aug. 21 before 35th District Court Judge James Plakas who ordered the pair jailed on $20,000 or 10 percent bonds.

Homecoming date is changed

The homecoming parade and high school football game in Northville has been rescheduled.

In a prepared statement, district officials said that the festivities this year will begin with the homecoming parade at 6 p.m. Friday, Oct. 10 followed by the homecoming football game at 7 p.m. at Tom Holzer Ford Field.

The Northville Mustangs will play against the Novi Wildcats at the field, located on Eight Mile Road across from Hillside Middle School, just west of Amerman Elementary School.

The homecoming dance will take place at 7 p.m. Oct. 11 at Northville High Schools following Homecoming Spirit Week activities at the school Oct. 6-11.

District officials said the change was made from the original Oct. 3-4 date in recognition of the Yom Kippur holiday.

"We apologize for any inconvenience this change in Homecoming dates may cause for students, families, staff and community members. In the future, rest assured that we will be more proactive in reviewing calendar conflicts prior to setting dates for special events such as Homecoming," officials said in the prepared release.

"We appreciate your understanding as we seek to recognize the diversity of our Northville school community and ensure all members have the opportunity to enjoy this year's Homecoming celebrations."

Bark for Life Canton registration under way

Registration is under way for Bark for Life of Canton, a non-competitive walk designed to take a bite out of cancer.

Bark For Life adds a twist to the American Cancer Society traditional Relay For Life, serving as a fundraising activity to honor the care-giving qualities of canine companions while supporting the mission of the American Cancer Society.

The 4th Annual Bark for Life will begin with registration at 10 a.m. Sept. 20 in Heritage Park in Canton and opening ceremonies are scheduled for 11 a.m. prior to laps around the path with canines in tow. Participants have earned pledges from supporters for the laps they walk during the event which will include special laps around the path, a survivor celebration, music provided by Metro Entertainment DJ Services, food available from official vendor Burger Spot, photography provided by Eye 4 One photography, children's activities, doggie vendors, best costume contest, musical sit, and other on-sight activities.

The event began in 2011 after only four short months of planning when 78 canine participants joined the event which generated more than $5,500. By 2012, the committee raised $18,000 in the fight against cancer with almost 100 dogs participating. Last year, the event matched the 2012 attendance and donations.

"Dogs have many roles in their owners lives. They are not only a pet but also a best friend, as well a member of the family," said Janet Stafford, event chair. "When a person is going through cancer treatment, sometimes as a human it is hard to find the right words of encouragement and support. Yet, a dog doesn't need words or direction. They somehow know just what they need to do whether it is cuddling next to you, getting you up for a walk or just being there. They play an important role in the caregiving process. "This is why Bark For life, a Relay For Life event, recognizes the caregiving qualities they provide. We celebrate the support they give their loved ones and they too help us at our event take one step closer to finding a cure for cancer."

Event organizers are continuing to recruit dogs and their owners to take part in Bark For Life this year. To register online visit www.relayforlife.org/barkcanton-mi
